Sunni militants fighting under the banner of Al Qaeda appeared to make gains across Anbar Province on Saturday, using snipers and rocket-propelled grenades in heavy street fighting as they secured nearly full control of Falluja and captured the strategic town Karma. Government forces and the tribal militias fighting with them seemed unable to resist the militants advances. My humble words for my 71st birthday celebration on 3 Kings Day. i've been asked many times how i celebrate my birthday. Since i celebrate every day i wake up alive that for me is the best way i can answer the question regarding the celebration of my birthday. At my age i believe i've lived much longer than i had expected to live. And that's an excellent reason why i should celebrate every day i wake up, look up at the sky to see if there are stars or the moon out and feel the palpitation of my heart to confirm that i'm alive for real. The reaction to my allergies can make me aware that i'm alive, but that's something i don't really like to use because it can affect my desire to celebrate life.

i believe we should celebrate every day just for having awoken. When i've this idea with people they have question it. My response is that we should pay attention to the relativity of the human destiny. Because it doesn't matter how miserable one feels and how bad one thinks conditions are, the fact remains one is alive. And when one feels miserable all one has to do is to look around and one will see another person in worse conditions doing what might look impossible and facing the challenge without complaining. If one feels miserable because he or she lost an eye the person he or she sees dealing with the challenge that seems impossible is totally blind. That's why we should always take into consideration the relativity of the human destiny. When we start a new year or the calendar is telling us a new year has started we should look at it as a chance to complete what we have not been able to accomplish in the past. When we face a crisis we should look at it as an opportunity to deal with it and to find a solution. It doesn't matter where we are. For example, when the earthquake devastated Mexico City and there was a major crisis we came up with the idea to raise funds from the prison population in order to give a hand to the victims of the earthquake. We talked to the staff and the idea was accepted. We were allowed to set up tables and get the prisoners to sign a form to have the money discounted from their funds. Within two hours we had raised over five thousand dollars. At first we had no idea how to help the victims. But after discussing the issue we were able to come up with a solution. We were able to do what for others seemed impossible. Celebrate life and not the commodification of it. We can share and enjoy the act of and make it meaningful. We can celebrate any such moment and give meaning to our daily life and make it a real important cultural event. Life is an act of giving and receiving. But when the sharing of gifts is commodified it becomes another act of consumerism and our culture is the one that suffers its consequences. Any moment we celebrate our culture we are helping to pass it on to future generations and to strengthened it. But if we allow it to become an act of consumerism we are contributing to its vulgarization and its demise. Let's celebrate 3 pass it on to future generations and to strengthened it. But if we allow it to become an act of consumerism we are contributing to its vulgarization and its demise. Let's celebrate 3 Kings Day and enjoy it to the utmost. If we believe a better and more just world is possible, we don't have to go to a far away place in the globe to make our contribution to such a lofty cause. We can do it right where we live. But we have to be willing to roll up our sleeves and do the hard work. Words are important, but it's the work that bears fruits. And if we learn one lesson in life that's worthwhile holding on and passing it on is that the only thing that's impossible is that that doesn't get done. It was Madeba who said that any problem us humans create have a solution. If there is a poverty problem it can be solved if we tackle it. Let's emulate Madeba's example. Let's dare to struggle. let's dare to win. Talk the talk and walk the walk. i leave you with a big hug with much love. Take care, abrazos, Oscar Lopez Rivera Anarchism is part of a broader range of libertarian socialist thought and action that includes the practical achievements of revolutionary Spain in 1936; reaches further to worker-owned enterprises spreading today in the American rust belt, in northern Mexico, in Egypt, and many other countries, most extensively in the Basque country in Spain; and encompasses the many cooperative movements around the world and a good part of feminist and civil and human rights initiatives. This broad tendency in human development seeks to identify structures of hierarchy, authority and domination that constrain human development, and then subject them to a very reasonable challenge: Justify yourself. A former Columbia, Illinois resident pled guilty on January 10, 2014, to a two-count indictment charging him, in count one, with receipt of visual depictions of minors engaged in sexually explicit conduct, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 2252(a)(2); and, in count two, with possession of visual depictions of minors engaged in sexually explicit conduct, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 2252(a)(4)(B), the United States Attorney for the Southern District of Illinois, Stephen R. Wigginton, announced today. Neil E. Purdy, 29, formerly of Columbia, Illinois, faces a term of imprisonment of not less than five but not more than 20 years, a fine up to $250,000, and a term of supervised release of five years to life on count one; and a term of imprisonment of not more than 10 years, a fine up to $250,000, and a term of supervised release of five years to life on count two. In addition, upon his release from prison, Purdy must register as a sex offender. Sentencing is scheduled for May 16, 2014, in East St. Louis, Illinois. Purdy has been held without bond since his initial appearance on April 26, 2013.

The investigation began on February 7, 2012, when an individual contacted the Columbia Police Department to report that the defendant molested his/her 14-year-old child. He/she also told the Columbia police that he/she saw the defendant "Google" the phrase, "where can I find really young porn." He/she said that, when he/she asked the defendant, "How long have you had this little problem?" Purdy responded, "About three years." On February 16, 2012, Purdy, a member of the U.S. Navy Reserve with top secret clearance, admitted to Columbia the number of hunger strikers in Guantanamo has doubled since the final set of official figures was released by the US authorities on December 2 2013. The report, compiled by human rights charity Reprieve, uses prisoner testimony to reveal that 33 men detained in Guantanamo are on hunger strike, with 16 being force fed. The Joint Task Force at Guantanamo, which runs the prison, announced in December of 2013 that they would no longer release official figures of those on hunger strike because they did not want to 'further their protests'. The report also reveals that authorities at the prison are punishing those on hunger strike by sending them to the strictest of the camps, "Camp V Echo". One detainee described his experiences there to his lawyer at Reprieve: "My cell in the dreadful Camp V Echo is constructed in a strange manner. It is designed to torture the person who is held there. All the surfaces made of steel. The bed is steel. The walls are steel. The floor is steel. The ceiling is steel. There is no toilet, but the hole in the ground is made of steel." British resident Shaker Aamer, who remains imprisoned despite having been cleared by both the Bush and Obama administrations, said: "[I was] strapped to the bed for 24 hours except to use the toilet. The [force-feeding] tube was in 24 hours a day. We would be fed for 30-40 minutes each time, with Ensure cans, two cans, three times a day. Some of the prisoners became zombies, as if they were already dead. I dropped weight to 130 pounds. I told the doctors, 'I want to die peacefully. I want no intervention.' But they refused this." Mr Aamer's British wife and four British children, the youngest of whom he has never met, live in London. British Prime Minister David Cameron has raised his case directly with President Obama, yet Mr Aamer remains imprisoned. There is an ongoing police investigation into Mr Aamer's treatment at the hands of British and US officials. 155 men are still detained in Guantanamo Bay, 77 of who have been cleared for release. Yesterday (Saturday) marked the twelfth anniversary of the first arrival of prisoners at the detention camp. Of the 779 men known to have been held there 624 have been released. More prisoners have died than have been put on trial. In an endlessly mutating world of media forms, scholars, creative practitioners and professionals in a variety of fields need to understand the ways in which media transforms and dissolves boundaries among disciplines and creates new forms of knowledge and cultural production. The Master of Arts (M.A.) in Media Studies provides students with the conceptual and practical tools necessary to prepare themselves to engage some of the fundamental challenges and complexities of our times. The program interrogates the social, practical, economic, political and theoretical stakes of mediation considered in the widest possible sense, encompassing more traditional approaches to the study of media (print, film, photography, audio and television), in conjunction with approaches that address the massive shifts produced by the computer and internet including gaming and social media Students will benefit from an academic environment shaped not only by theorists and critics, but also by distinguished practitioners of the forms being studied. Students study and work among theorists, artists and designers and are taught by faculty-practitioners. Our courses are small, intensive, seminars taught exclusively by professors. The program is 30 credits and can be completed in threesemesters. Among the core requirements are (1) six credit hours of courses

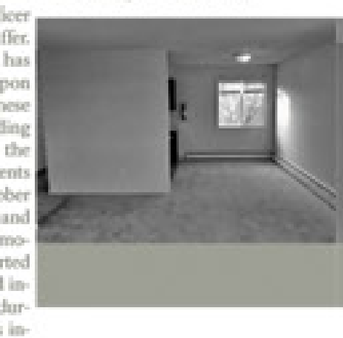
An individual who robbed a bank yesterday morning in Phoenix and who later was shot and killed in an exchange of gunfire with a Phoenix police detective has been identified as the same individual responsible for the attempted bank robbery in Atlanta, the robbery of the BancorpSouth in Tupelo, the shooting of Tupelo Police Officer Joseph Edward Maher, and the murder of Tupelo Police Officer Kevin "Gale" Stauffer. This identification has been made based upon similarities between these bank robberies, including the clothing worn by the bank robber, statements made by the bank robber during the robberies, and the robber's overall modus operandi, supported by other evidence and information collected during the course of this investigation. Additionally, cell phone records obtained via court order indicated that this individual's phone was in Atlanta, Tupelo, and Phoenix when the bank robberies were committed.



Not many people come to Fort McMurray, the notorious Alberta boom town on the edge of one of the world's largest industrial developments, to commune with the great northern woods. Most are here for the overtime, for the paid vacations, for the blue-collar jobs that pay six figures, for the work. This means that all of the bad things you've heard about Fort McMoney are true: the traffic really is murderous, there are liquor stores (many open until 2 a.m.) in every strip mall, and the place has a depressingly large population of desperately lonely guys blowing ridiculously fat paycheques on steroids, tattoos, monster trucks, and peelers. Spend foreign aid money on education, healthcare and lifting people out of poverty. For a fraction of the money we keep wasting each month on the failed war in Afghanistan or supporting the already wealthy Israeli military, we could be building schools in Afghanistan and Pakistan, helping Yemenis find a solution to their water shortages, and providing humanitarian aid to Syrian refugees. We'll make a lot more friends building clinics, wells, electrical grids and schools than vaporizing people with Hellfire missiles.

The Pirah are supremely gifted in all the ways necessary to ensure their continued survival in the jungle: they know the usefulness and location of all important plants in their area; they understand the behavior of local animals and how to catch and avoid them; and they can walk into the jungle naked, with no tools or weapons, and walk out three days later with baskets of fruit, nuts, and small game. The Pirah speak the Pirah language. They call any other language Crooked head. Members of the Pirah can whistle their language, which is how the tribe's men communicate when hunting in the jungle.

Steamed Buns on ChaoYang road and more of a hole-in-the-wall than a street stall; at 5pm everyday youll find this place busy with people buying an assortment of steamed buns. Caibao, steamed buns stuffed with veggies, are the most popular. But they also sell mantou (plain white steamed buns), heibao (slightly sweet brown sugar buns) and huazzhuan (salty chinese celery). These are a great filling snack and they will set you back a measly $NTD12!

The long-overdue election functions, substantially, as an attempt to bring Madagascar back into the international community. Already one of the poorest countries in the world, Madagascar was further isolated and foreign aid disappeared in 2009 when 34 year-old radio disc jockey Andry Rajoelina, with the help of the military, toppled dairy magnate Marc Ravalomanana in a coup d'etat. Virtually no progress was made for four years with the economy contracting severely. Political and economic progress has limped along since. A new rugby stadium is one of the only tangible accomplishments of the "transitional" regime led by Andry Rajoelina, who is now close to completing a full electoral mandate.

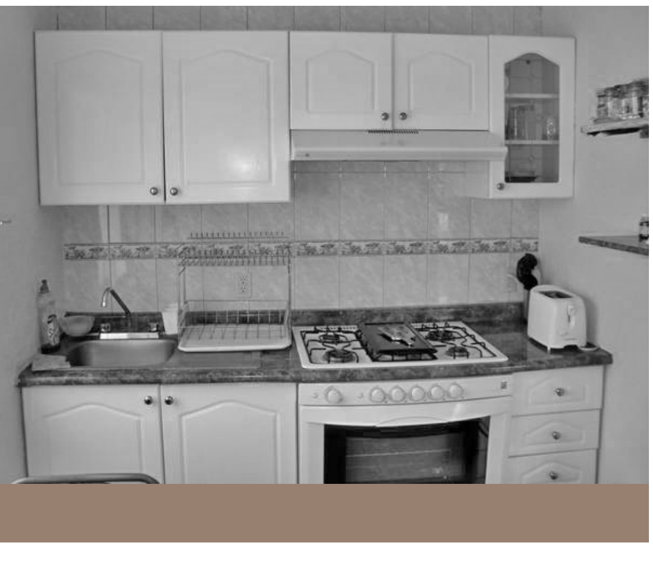
The NSA computer attacks are performed by a special department called TAO (Tailored Access Operations). Public sources show that this department employs more than a thousand hackers. According to the Washington Post, the NSA has been carrying out this type of cyber operation since 1998. The American intelligence service - NSA - infected more than 50,000 computer networks worldwide with malicious software designed to steal sensitive information. Documents provided by former NSA-employee Edward Snowden and seen by this newspaper, prove this.



A Toronto police officer was suspended with pay after he fatally shot a young man wielding a knife in an empty streetcar, police said Monday, as hundreds of people in Canadas largest city protested the shooting that was caught on video and posted on YouTube. Some protesters called it unnecessary police force. A former Toronto police detective who saw the video said it appeared that excessive force had been used. Investigators were looking into the circumstances surrounding the shooting, the citys police chief said. The video shows 18-year-old Sammy Yatim holding a knife inside the streetcar early Saturday, with police outside. Yatim goads police while officers yell, Drop your knife! Shortly after, three shots are fired. After a pause, six more shots are fired. A Taser is later used on Yatim.

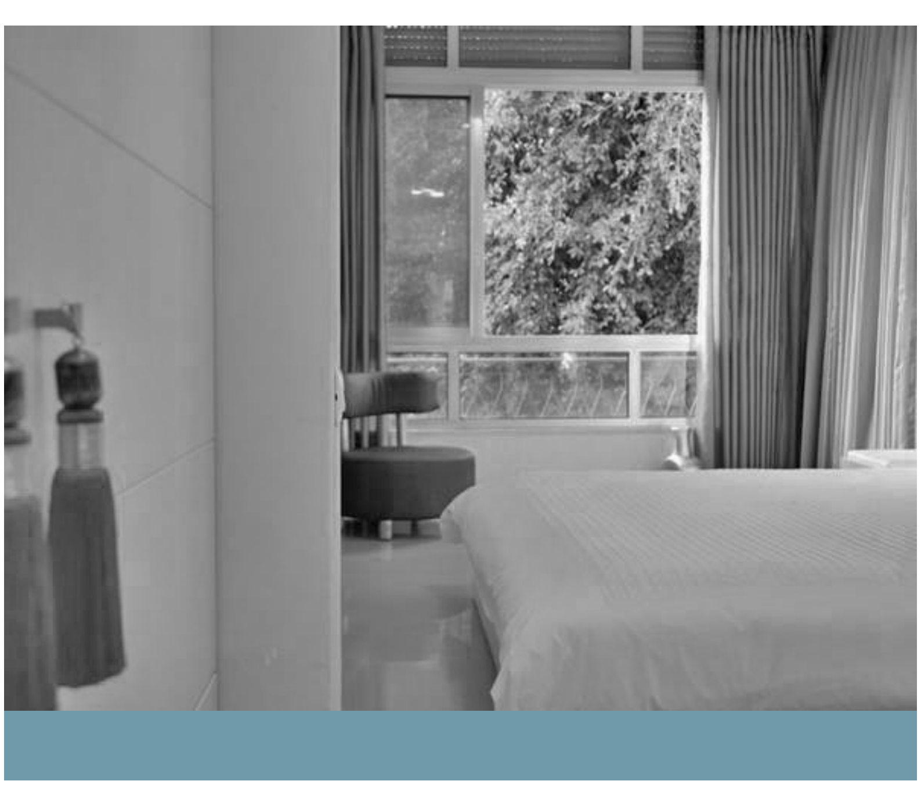
Bank executives have displayed disrespect for both law and regulation, that they are not worthy of the public's trust, and that they are culturally impaired at a profound level.



It's not easy to maintain a civil tone while describing the magnitude of the misbehavior among executives at Wall Street's largest institutions. To criticize bankers is to describe large-scale wrongdoing, mass-produced outrages that lead to widespread misery. It can't be done without routinely deploying words like "perjury," "forgery," "fraud," "deceit," "corruption" and "rapaciousness."

I must first tender an apology for this unsolicited mail to you. I am conscious that this is certainly not a proper manner of approach to foster a relationship of trust but because of the circumstances and urgency surrounding this venture I decided to reach you via this medium to join me put claims on this fund before it is seized or confiscated by the authorities. The City of Detroit's bankruptcy was driven by a severe decline in revenues (and, importantly, not an increase in obligations to fund pensions). Depopulation and long-term unemployment caused Detroit's property and income tax revenues to plummet. The state of Michigan exacerbated the problems by slashing revenue it shared with the city. The city's overall expenses have declined over the last five years, although its financial expenses have increased. In addition, Wall Street sold risky financial instruments to the city, which now threaten the resolution of this crisis. To return Detroit to long-term fiscal health, the city must increase revenue and extract itself from the financial transactions that threaten to drain its budget even further.

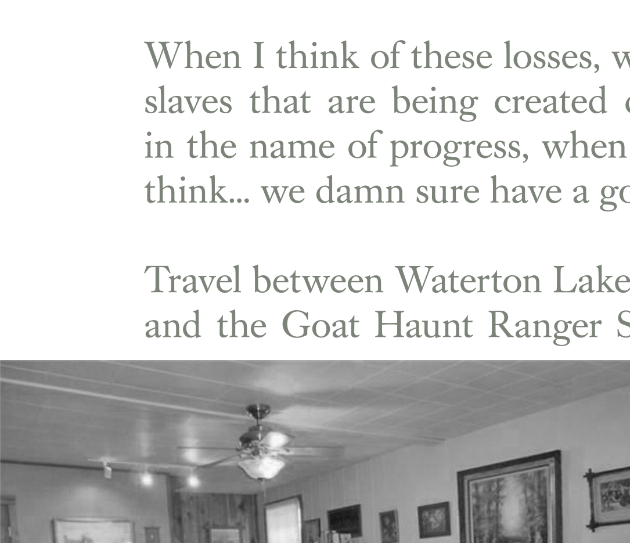
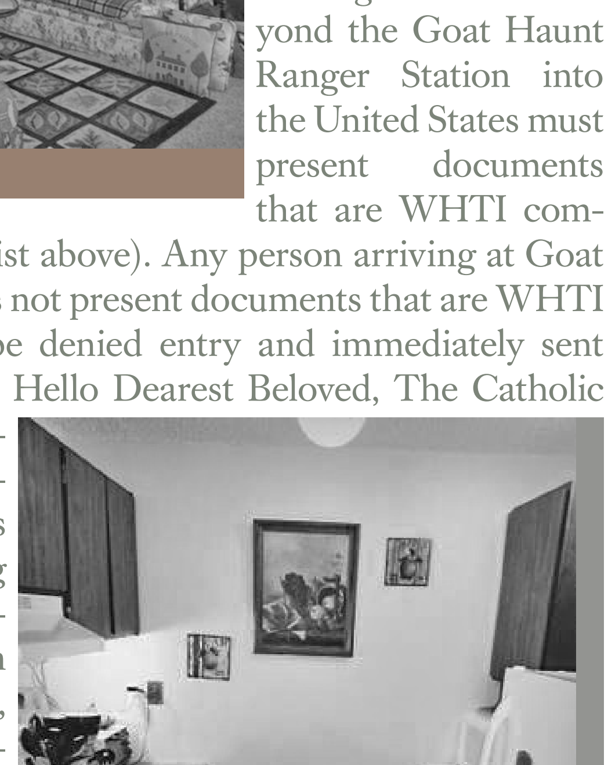
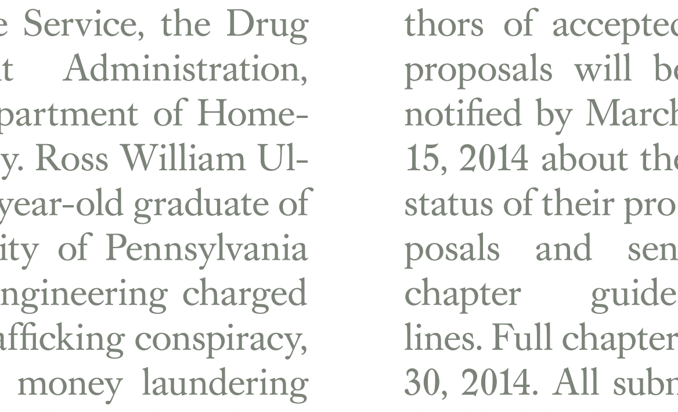
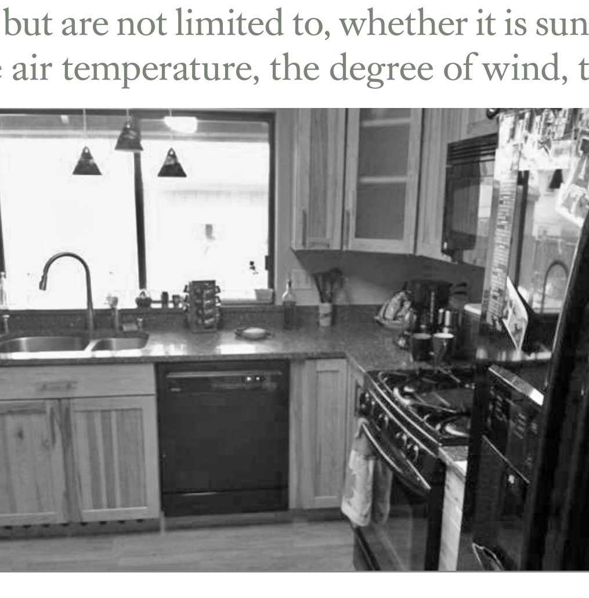
When I think about all we have lost to this corporate world, when I think about the losses of clean water and rivers and oceans and when I think about the losses of clean air when I think about the losses of freedom for hard working families that once had a father that could take care of his family with as single job but now has to work two or three jobs and the mother must work too and the children that come home from school with their own key and have to wait the return of one of their parents. When I think of these losses, when I think of the wage slaves that are being created daily all over the world in the name of progress, when I think of these losses I think... we damn sure have a good reason to mourn...

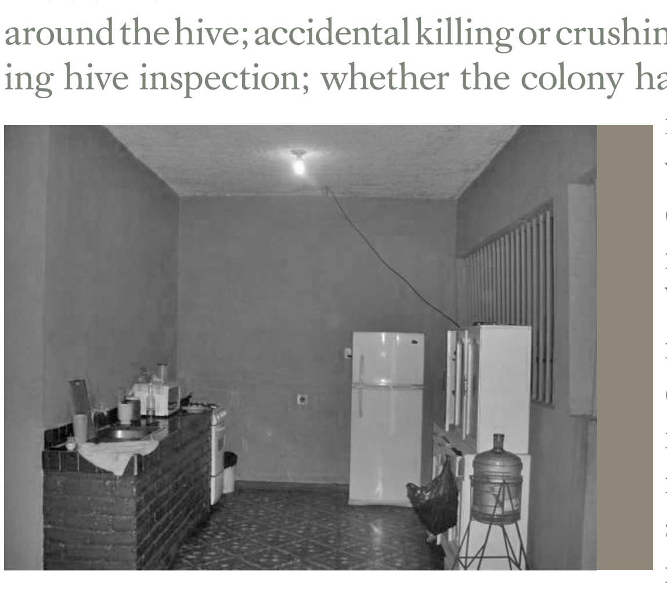
The FBI used information from Comcast in the investigation and collaborated with US Customs and Border Patrol, the Internal Revenue Service, the Drug Enforcement Administration, and the Department of Homeland Security. Ross William Ulbricht, a 29-year-old graduate of the University of Pennsylvania School of Materials Science and Engineering charged with one count each of narcotics trafficking conspiracy, computer hacking conspiracy and money laundering conspiracy, according to the filing. 'Silk Road' website, which had operated since early 2011, also offered tutorials on hacking ATM machines, contact lists for black market connections and counterfeiters, and guns and hit men for sale, according to the charges. Silk Road was only accessible on The Onion Router [Tor], which is an anonymous web browser that allows certain sites to operate out of reach of the authorities by routing connections through many different layers of the Internet to make identification difficult. Typhoon Haiyan continues to race towards Yap and Palau bringing the risk of damaging winds and heavy rainfall to the small Tropical Islands Wednesday through Thursday. In 1988 there were 350,000 cases of polio worldwide. Last year there were 223. But getting all the way to zero will mean spending billions of dollars, penetrating the most remote regions of the globe, and facing down Taliban militants to get to the last unprotected children on Earth. (1) Bee stings: European honey bees generally are not aggressive toward people, but are defensive of their hive (family and food stores). However, the degree of defensiveness of an individual colony can vary greatly from day-to-day and even within the same day, depending on various factors. Such factors include, but are not limited to, whether it is sunny or overcast, the air temperature, the degree of wind, the amount of time the hive is open for inspection; odors of the human body, breath; color and texture of clothing; the degree of sharp, quick movement around the hive; accidental killing or crushing of bees during hive inspection; whether the colony has a functioning queen; whether the colony is being harassed by skunks, raccoons or opossums at night, being invaded by ants or being robbed by other honey bee colonies or wasps; and other factors unique to a honey bee colony at the time of inspection that currently are not known to or ascertainable by the beekeeper. Yei Chenda, who is 23, says he joined the company in 2011. "They sold me to one captain of a fishing ship in Fiji, where my passport was taken and I was forced to work nearly 18 hours a day." Yei Chenda says he was told by the Taiwanese captain that if he worked hard, he would be paid extra, and his parents would get his salary. But he says it was months before the ship called in to port and when he was finally able to ring his parents, they told him they had received "nothing." Another victim, Rem Vannak, told the paper, Voice of America, he was in Fiji for about two years working 21-hour days for no pay and was beaten when he complained. Cambodia's Interior Ministry says in at least 700 cases Cambodians were sent to work on ships by Giant Ocean, winding up across the globe, off the coasts of South Africa, Fiji, Qatar, Malaysia and Singapore. Kun Nath, another alleged victim of Lin's company, says he ended up in South Africa. "In one day, we would sleep only two or three hours," he said. "And though we would work for two or three days continuously, we still had just three hours to sleep. Sometimes, the owner of the ship even hit me and my brothers when we fell asleep. I was thrown into the sea many times, but other Khmers rescued me." An estimated 34,000 Cambodians are believed to have gone to work abroad, in places like Thailand, Malaysia, South Korea or Japan in the past five months. In war, nations come alive. Killing and dying substantiate the existence of the nation-state. The sound and fury of battle lends credence to the idea that nations are real. Warfare and battle-the production of dead and wounded soldiers-anchors belief in material reality. Human beings are sacrificed in the name of perpetuating a magical entity-the body politic. Look at what happens to Wal Mart stores. Wal Mart comes to a small town, and says "We want to build a store here. It will bring jobs and industry. People will come from all over to shop here and you will get the taxes." They want 4 years tax free, and they want to build their store and not pay any building permit fees. Usually, the small town agrees. All the other stores in the town go out of business. The town loses 70% of it's tax revenue, and starts to go into debt. Getting the Wal Mart jobs is competitive, and people will travel 75 miles in any direction for one of them. After the 4 years of tax free Wal Mart, they ABANDON THE STORE AND LEAVE. All other stores in the area are closed. The town is bankrupt. Now if you are a reasonable person you are saying "How can they do that trick twice? Certainly a newspaper would write about it or something and a new town could research it... Well let me tell you: there are 3 movies about it. There are thousands of articles, dozens of books. And it STILL is happening. Freenet has a different threat model to Tor and the Mixmaster remailers. Freenet is designed to resist censorship: The network must therefore be robust, and content must be distributed without requiring a central server, whether anonymous or not. Anonymity is important for requesters and especially for those who upload content in the first place. The typical example is a corporate or government whistleblower. Generally to find the originator of some content, the attacker must be able to predict the data in advance, must be able to move across the network relatively quickly, and must be able to perform the attack while the data is being inserted; after that, it is distributed across the network and is much harder to trace, and the originator may have left the network. However, if by chance or by overwhelming force the attacker is connected to the whistleblower (or e.g. seizes the computers of everyone on the network), he may be able to identify this much more quickly. All of this is vastly more difficult on a darknet, where everyone connects only to their friends, where it is very hard for an attacker to find nodes, and where to connect to a given node he must social engineer its operator! Freenet does support opennet mode (plug and play), but darknet is far more secure, and far more difficult to block on a national firewall.

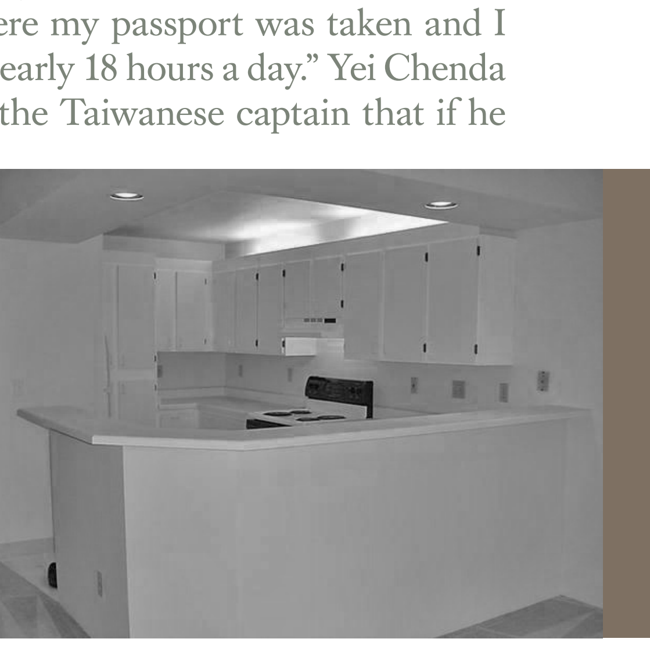


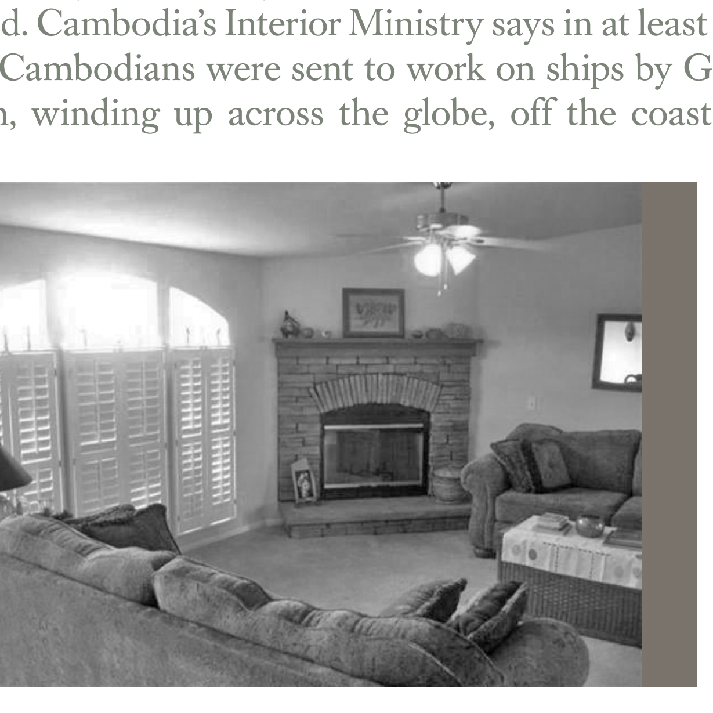


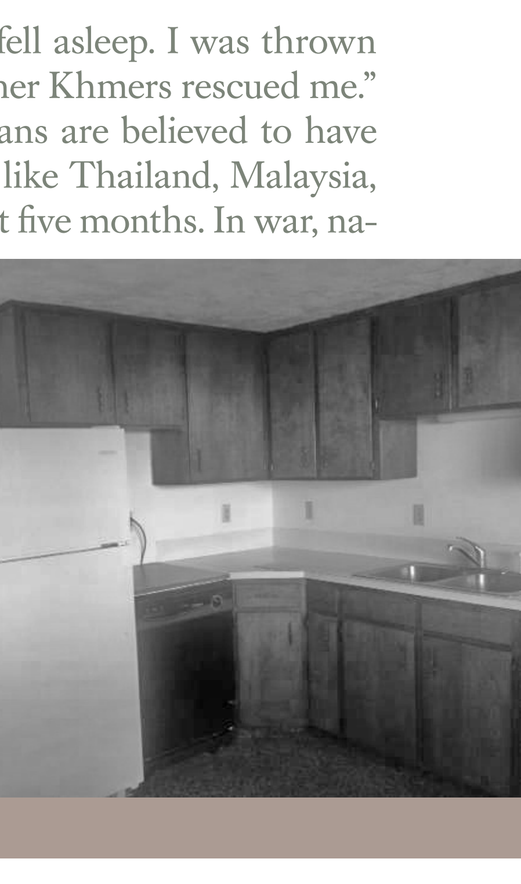


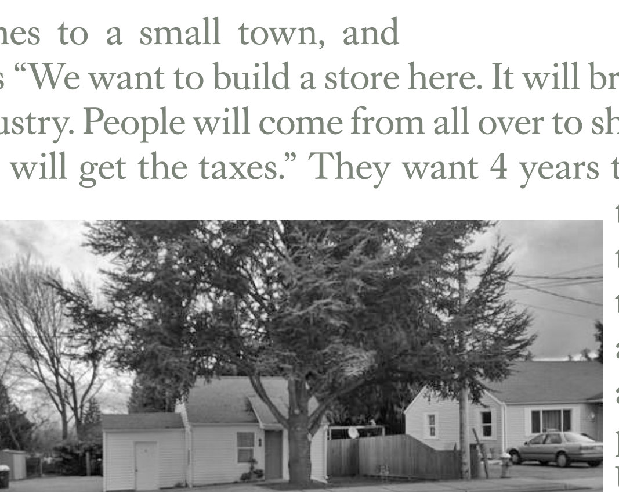


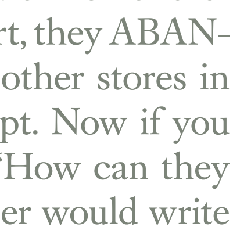


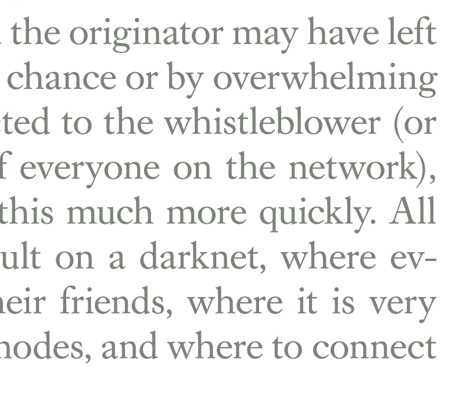




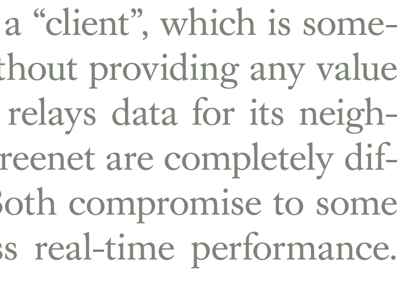








Tor on the other hand is designed to anonymise real-time data streams, on the assumption that the list of nodes can be public, that there is a free world where nodes can be operated safely, that the authors of controversial content will be able to either host (hidden) web servers themselves or upload it to other (hidden, but usually centralised) storage systems, and so on. And Tor has a concept of a "client", which is somebody who uses the service without providing any value to it; on Freenet, every node relays data for its neighbours. Hence the attacks on Freenet are completely different to the attacks on Tor. Both compromise to some degree to enable more or less real-time performance. If you can use the darknet, trust your friends, don't reinsert files, always use the "Insert a random, safe key" option, and change your anonymous identity after some volume of inserts, you should be relatively safe using Freenet. However this has not yet been quantified. If you can connect, build up some trust in your anonymous persona, insert your controversial content, and then disappear, again, you are better off with Freenet, especially if the content is a website (but if you are connecting on opennet, beware of seednode compromises). In some other cases, Tor is better.



We are still working on Freenet's security and there are major security enhancements which have not yet been implemented, most of which will go in before 1.0. Cryptographic tunnels similar to Tor's onion routing are one possibility, which would greatly reduce the impact of many of the below attacks, but there are several other enhancements planned, both to anonymity and to network robustness/undetectability. Submission Procedure Researchers and practitioners are invited to submit on or before February 28, 2014, a 2-3 page chapter proposal clearly explaining the mission and concerns of his or her proposed chapter. Submissions should be made through the link at the bottom of this page. Authors of accepted proposals will be notified by March 15, 2014 about the status of their proposals and sent chapter guidelines. Full chapters are expected to be submitted by June 30, 2014. All submitted chapters will be reviewed on a double-blind review basis. Contributors may also be requested to serve as reviewers for this project. The world is long overdue for a completely new system of governance. If there was ever a need for political representation or a paternalistic and opaque authority it has been removed by technology. Every political system we have tried has proven incapable of protecting human rights and dignity. Every political system we have tried has devolved into oligarchy. To effect the change we require immediately, to give individuals control and responsibility, to bring regional systems under regional governance, allow global collaboration and protect the heritage of future generations, we need a new political model.

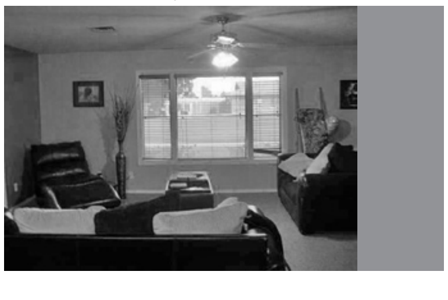
A Highland, Illinois resident pled guilty on January 17, 2014, to a two-count indictment, charging him in count one with transportation of visual depictions of minors engaged in sexually explicit conduct and in count two with possession of visual depictions of minors engaged in sexually explicit conduct, the United States Attorney for the Southern District of Illinois, Stephen R. Wigginton, announced today. Daniel C. Shaw, a/k/a "Josh Shackfer," 38, faces a term of imprisonment of not less than five but not more than 20 years, a fine up to $250,000, and a term of supervised release of five years to life on count one; and a term of imprisonment of not more than 10 years, a fine up to $250,000, and a term of supervised release of five years to life on count two. In addition, upon his release from prison, Shaw must register as a sex offender as a condition of his supervised release. Sentencing is scheduled for May 30, 2014, in East St. Louis, Illinois. The investigation began on September 23, 2012, when the mother of a 15-year-old minor contacted the Citrus County, Florida Sheriff's Office and reported that a man sent her daughter pictures of a penis and that she found sexually explicit texts between the man and her daughter. When interviewed, the daughter verified that she was sent a picture of a penis but said that she deleted it. She also admitted that her conversations with the man, whom she knew as "Josh Shackfer," were sexual and that she told him her age. She said that Shackfer told her that he would be 19 in October and that he would be moving to Florida soon. After numerous texts from the mother to the man telling him to stop communicating with her daughter were ignored, the mother reported the incident to the Citrus County Sheriff's Office.

The subsequent Florida investigation revealed that, from on or about July 30, 2010 until January 12, 2011, Defendant Daniel C. Shaw, posing as a 16-year-old boy named Josh Shackfer, made contact with several minor females in Florida using MySpace. Shaw was 35 years old at the time and lived in Highland, Illinois. The investigation also revealed that Shaw, disguised as Josh Shackfer, engaged in sexually explicit conversations with several minor females, either through text messaging, instant messaging, or telephone calls, knowing that these girls were minors. He also asked some of these minor females to send him photographs of them naked and/or of their naked genitalia. Several females did so, including M.P., who sent close-up photographs of her naked genitalia. The pictures of M.P., which were clearly visual depictions of a minor engaged in sexually conduct, were found on Shaw's MySpace e-mail account. After being shown the pictures by a Highland, Illinois Police officer, Shaw identified the pictures of M.P. by initialing each of them and indicated that he knew M.P. was either 16 or 17 (count two). In a voluntary statement to a Highland, Illinois Police detective, Shaw admitted communicating with the minor females in Florida using a fake MySpace page under the name of Josh Shackfer, in which he identified himself as an 18-year-old. He said that he used images he found on the Internet on this MySpace page. He also admitted engaging in sexually explicit conversations with these underage girls and trading pictures with these minors. Shaw saved the pictures sent to him from the minor females, including the sexually explicit pictures, on a Yahoo e-mail account, stating that he had approximately 20 pictures on his account. Shaw said that he had been engaged in this activity for approximately six months and that he knew the girls he communicated with in Florida were between 14 and 17 years of age. The pictures that were downloaded also demonstrated that Shaw had transferred the visual depictions of the minors engaged in sexually explicit conduct from one e-mail account to another, via the internet (count one).



Shaw also provided a voluntary statement to members of the FBI's Springfield Child Exploitation Task Force in which he again admitted creating the fake Josh Shackfer MySpace page to communicate with underage girls.

Shaw also admitted asking these underage girls to send him their pictures, including pictures of their breasts, buttocks, and genitalia. He said that the trading of pictures between him and the minor females occurred during sexually oriented chats. Shaw admitted sending several pictures to M.P. and again acknowledged that he knew M.P. was a minor. He said that M.P. sent him between five and seven pictures of her breasts, buttocks, and other "body poses." Now that anti-Chinese sentiment are all the rage, the book takes pains to diminish, ridicule or ignore significant Chinese achievements. China was not a maritime power, it sneers. Quite right- they didn't enslave a quarter of the globe into an empire. The fact that they travelled and traded with Africa and Mesoamerica ages before the White Man is not a noteworthy accomplishment.

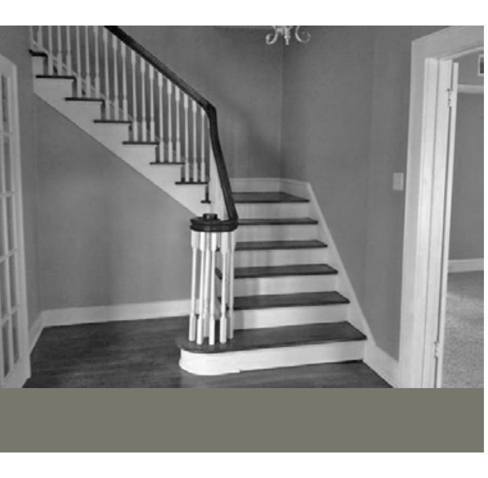
It is coming from the awareness that all of our crises are connected to an economy rigged for the wealthiest. The symptoms of big finance capitalism create the poverty, low wages, economic insecurity and environmental destruction so a handful can profit. While these facts have been hidden by political leaders and corporate mass media, now people are seeing them and understand the task we have before us. David Crisostomi, 38, of East Providence, Rhode Island, was sentenced on Wednesday to 35 years in federal prison for using a prepubescent minor to manufacture child pornography and for possessing and distributing child pornography, announced United States Attorney Peter F. Neronha, Colonel Steven G. O’Donnell, Superintendent of the Rhode Island State Police, and Vincent B. Lisi, Special Agent in Charge of the Boston Field Office of the FBI.

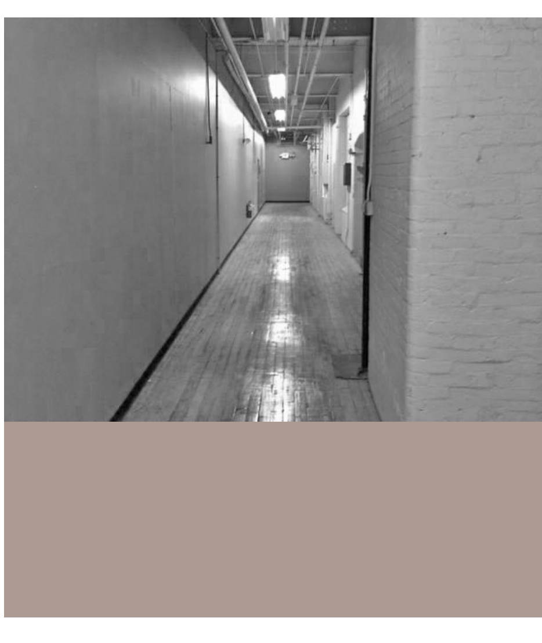


At sentencing, U.S. District Court Judge John J. McConnell, Jr. also ordered Crisostomi to serve lifetime supervised release upon completion of his prison term. Crisostomo pleaded guilty on March 12, 2013, to three counts of production of child pornography and one count each of possession and distribution of child pornography. At the time of his guilty plea, Crisostomi admitted to the court that on at least three occasions he participated in the recording of child pornography with a prepubescent minor and that he downloaded and shared child pornography with others. United States Attorney Peter F. Neronha commented, “A child’s innocence, once taken, can never be fully recovered. The defendant preyed on the most vulnerable and the most deserving of our protection. Every day of his very long sentence is warranted. I want to thank all those who helped bring this defendant to justice, in particular the men and women from various law enforcement agencies who make up the Rhode Island State Police ICAC and the FBI, who consistently demonstrate extraordinary leadership in this critical area.” According to information presented to the court, on January 6, 2012, an undercover agent from the FBI’s Innocent Images Operations Unit observed that a user later identified as David Crisostomi was online and was sharing two folders containing child pornography. Three days later, an undercover agent observed that Crisostomi was online and was now sharing four folders containing child pornography. On February 16, 2012, agents from the FBI and the Rhode Island State Police Internet Crimes Against Children (ICAC) Task Force executed a federal search warrant at Crisostomi’s residence and seized numerous images and videos depicting child pornography; computers; and other electronic devices. Crisostomi has been detained in federal custody since his arrest on February 16, 2012.

Colonel Steven G. O’Donnell, Superintendent of the Rhode Island State Police, commented, “The underlying facts uncovered in this investigation resulted in this sentence. For more than the next three decades, this defendant will not be a threat to any children, which is comforting. I commend the investigators from the State Police ICAC Task Force, the FBI agents, and the prosecutors for bringing a predator to justice.”

Ubiquitous surveillance should have died with the fall of Communism, but it got a new -- and even more dangerous -- life with the intelligence community’s post-9/11 “never again” terrorism mission. This quixotic goal of preventing something from happening forces us to try to know everything that does happen. This pushes the NSA to eavesdrop on online gaming worlds and on every cell phone in the world. But it’s a fool’s errand; there are simply too many ways to communicate.

We have no evidence that any of this surveillance makes us safer. NSA Director General Keith Alexander responded to these stories in June by claiming that he disrupted 54 terrorist plots. In October, he revised that number downward to 13, and then to “one or two.” At this point, the only “plot” prevented was that of a San Diego man sending $8,500 to support a Somali militant group. We have been repeatedly told that these surveillance programs would have been able to stop 9/11, yet the NSA didn’t detect the Boston bombings -- even though one of the two terrorists was on the watch list and the other had a sloppy social media trail. Bulk collection of data and metadata is an ineffective counterterrorism tool. United States Attorney Brendan V. Johnson announced that a Rosebud, South Dakota man convicted of possession of child pornography was sentenced on February 3, 2014, by U.S. District Court Judge Roberto A. Lange.

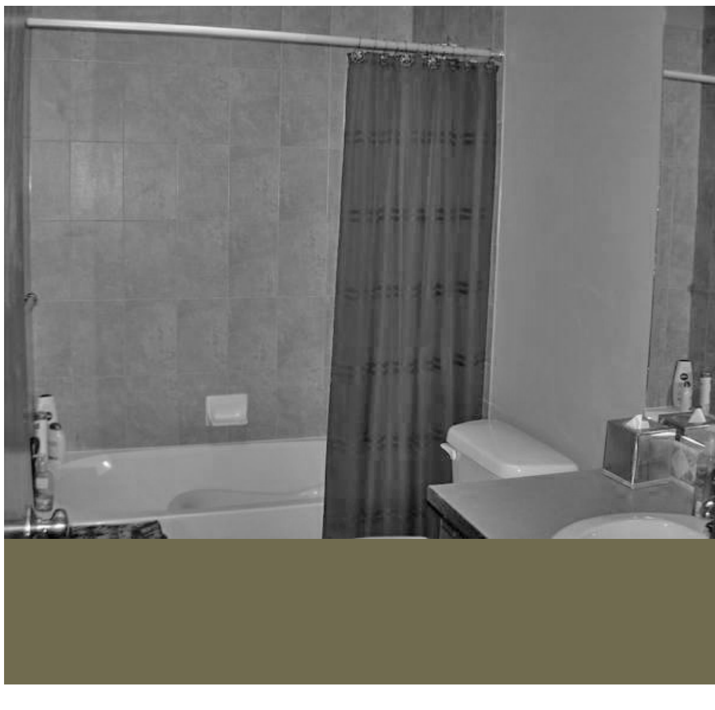


Jeremy Gunhammer, age 20, was sentenced to 36 months in custody, five years’ supervised release, and a $100 special assessment to the Federal Crime Victims Fund and was ordered to register as a sex offender. Gunhammer was indicted for possession of child pornography by a federal grand jury on June 12, 2013. He pled guilty on November 19, 2013. The conviction stems from incidents that took place between January 1, 2013 and May 31, 2013, when Gunhammer used the Internet to receive and possess numerous images of child pornography.

The investigation was conducted by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, South Dakota Division of Criminal Investigation, South Dakota Internet Crimes Against Children Task Force, Rosebud Sioux Tribe Law Enforcement Services, Bureau of Indian Affairs, Pennington County Sheriff’s Office, Rapid City Police Department, Sioux Falls Police Department, and the U.S. Marshals Service. Assistant U.S. Attorneys Tim Maher and Sarah Collins prosecuted the case. Gunhammer was immediately turned over to the custody of the U.S. Marshals Service. James Clapper, John Brennan, James Comey, Michael Flynn, Mattew Olsen. For the next 20 years I would go on from war zone to war zone as a foreign correspondent immersed in military culture. Repetitive rote learning and an insistence on blind obedience -- similar to the approach used to train a dog -- work on the battlefield. The military exerts nearly total control over the lives of its members. Its long-established hierarchy ensures that those who embrace the approved modes of behavior rise and those who do not are belittled, insulted and hazed. Many of the marks of civilian life are stripped away. Personal modes of dress, hairstyle, speech and behavior are heavily regulated. Individuality is physically and then psychologically crushed. Aggressiveness is rewarded. Compassion is demeaned. Violence is the favorite form of communication. These qualities are an asset in war; they are a disaster in civil society.

A Paris street scene painted by Camille Pissarro sold for 19.9 million ($32.1 million, 24 million euros) at a London sale on Wednesday, almost five times the previous record for the Impressionist master at auction. The Danish-French painter’s “Boulevard Montmartre, Matinee de Printemps”, widely considered to be one of the most important Impressionist works to come up for sale in the last decade, went under the hammer at London’s Sotheby’s auction house. The 1897 painting, an elevated view of a typical spring scene on the famous Paris thoroughfare, was originally owned by Jewish industrialist Max Silberberg, who was based in Breslau. The Nazis forced him to get rid of his entire collection, and he later died in the Holocaust. The painting was restituted to his family in 2000. “It is an honour to be entrusted with offering the greatest work by Camille Pissarro ever to appear at auction -- a work that encompasses such a richly painted canvas and a supremely elegant composition.”

In the Fukuoka area there are quite a few Chiroku (or sometimes Jiroku) shrines. This one is in Ijiri to the south of Hakata and downtown Fukuoka. They all enshrine the same male-female pair of kami, Takehaniyasuhiko, the male, and Haniyasuhime, the female, and were both created by Izanagi at the same time he created Susano, Amaterasu, etc while purifying himself after his journey. April is normally a high mosquito month but much depends on the amount of rain that has fallen and when it has fallen. High rain amounts = high mosquito population. Also, temperature, time-of-day, wind conditions and site location (upland, wetland etc.) can make a big difference.



Mosquito recordings can be interesting in establishing varying environmental conditions, variations as to time of day etc. Aside- although there are multiple species of mosquitoes down here, there are only about 12 species that relish humans and only the girls bite. Some folks believe that if you eat meat or bananas before going out, more of the critters will love you. I found that the crushed leaves of a local plant (Wedelia?) when rubbed on your clothing or skin does seem to be somewhat effective as a repellent. (The critters may buzz you but they usually won’t land and bite.) If you put in on your skin, check a small area to be certain that you do not get a reaction

We’ve got our 2nd floor deck hummer feeder under a light to keep it from freezing, so she is out early, before I get the Bark Butter out for the other early bird, the Townsend’s Warblers. We get about 4-6 of them in bad weather, and they are here chowing down on Bark Butter, a spreadable suet with peanuts in it. As I bring my food prep goodies out onto my deck and place them on the table, the Townsend’s hover about, waiting for me to dip into the Bark Butter tub to put some on my finger. Then, they’ll hover and take bits off my finger until they have enough to work on until I’m done. A Secure messaging service for Email, Chat,

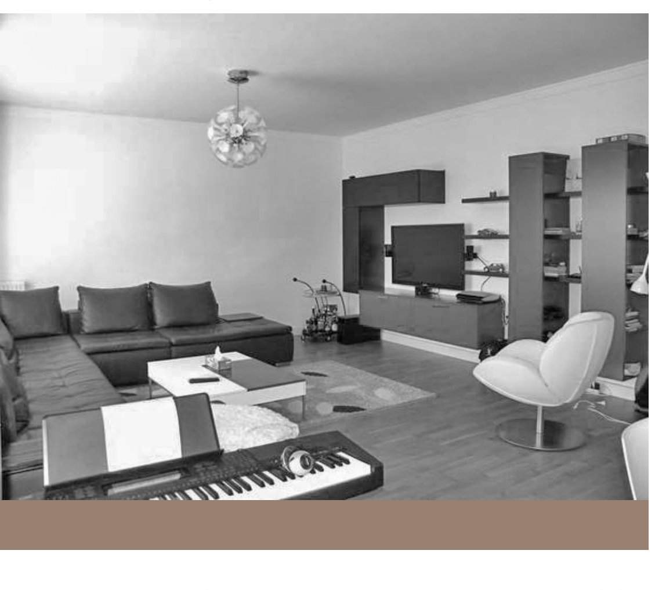
For key exchange it uses NTRU (latency based cryptography technique), and hence made a shield against quantum computing attacks. The service provider claims that they are not storing encryption keys on their servers and so the keys are not known to them, even if the government agency asks for any data of a particular due to any reason, so it would not be of any use to them. The service is available for free and also on a monthly premium basis, in both the plans, the security of data is same, but only storage capacity varies. Winning proposals are selected by an international group of more than 125 jurors voting online in a crowd-sourcing process to determine which submissions will receive funding and full administrative support to mount their exhibition in the location of their choosing. Proposals are evaluated anonymously on the strength of the idea alone. Exhibitions can be about any idea or theme that the organizer finds compelling. Past shows have explored highway construction and the resulting neighborhood destruction in Mexico City, Mexico; the effect of globalism on street vending in Phnom Penh, Cambodia; the link between science and extracurricular activities in Los Angeles, USA; do-it-yourself manufacturing in Bangkok, Thailand; and contemporary video art remixed by famous African video DJs in Kampala, Uganda. Many sailings visit Spain, France and Italy, or the Greek Isles. Some Mediterranean cruises call on ports in Israel, Morocco or Tunisia, and some include ports in the Black Sea.

Due to the cool climate, the cruising season in Northern Europe is short, from May through August. Itineraries generally range from seven to 14 days, and most sail in the Baltic Sea to legendary port cities like St. Petersburg, Stockholm and Copenhagen. There also are cruises that concentrate on the British Isles or the Norwegian Fjords. While many of Europe’s top cities are easily accessible by cruise ship, other great places such as Madrid, Paris, Prague and Zurich are not. A few cruise lines offer cruise tours that combine a Mediterranean or Northern Europe cruise with a land-based tour. Cruise tours allow you to spend some extra time in a cruise’s departure or arrival port or visit some of those terrific inland destinations.

“Hair is closely connected to a Native American’s innermost being and identity, and has profound religious significance for all tribes,” Montgomery attorney Mark Sabel, representing the plaintiffs, said in a statement Thursday. “Hair constitutes part of one’s identity as an Indian person, and is a cornerstone element in Native American religious practice.” United States Attorney Stephanie A. Finley announced today that Steven Deem, 52, of Mooringsport, Louisiana, was sentenced by U.S. District Judge S. Maurice Hicks to 240 months in prison and a lifetime of supervised release for distribution of child pornography. He is also required to register as a sex offender. According to evidence presented at the guilty plea on October 10, 2013, authorities discovered Deem had transmitted images of child pornography online in September 2012. Upon further investigation, they found that he had previously uploaded a video to YouTube discussing his views on children and sex. The YouTube video also contained images of nude and semi-nude children. Deem’s home was searched on November 1, 2012, and authorities discovered more than 43 images of child pornography.



The Louisiana Attorney General’s High Technology Crime Unit, Caddo Parish Sheriff’s Office, and the Federal Bureau of Investigation conducted the investigation. Assistant U.S. Attorney Earl M. Campbell prosecuted the case. Officials tapped by the Obama administration to lead the Trans-Pacific Partnership trade negotiations have received multimillion dollar bonuses from CitiGroup and Bank of America, financial disclosures obtained by Republic Report show. Stefan Selig, a Bank of America investment banker nominated to become the Under Secretary for International Trade at the Department of Commerce, received more than $9 million in bonus pay as he was nominated to join the administration in November. The bonus pay came in addition to the $5.1 million in incentive pay awarded to Selig last year. Michael Froman, the current U.S. Trade Representative, received over $4 million as part of multiple exit payments when he left CitiGroup to join the Obama administration. On Thursday, severe weather is possible from the Gulf Coast to the Great Lakes with damaging winds as the primary threat however, tornadoes will also be possible. Farther south and west, dry and windy conditions will lead to fire weather concerns. And behind the system, winter weather makes a return.

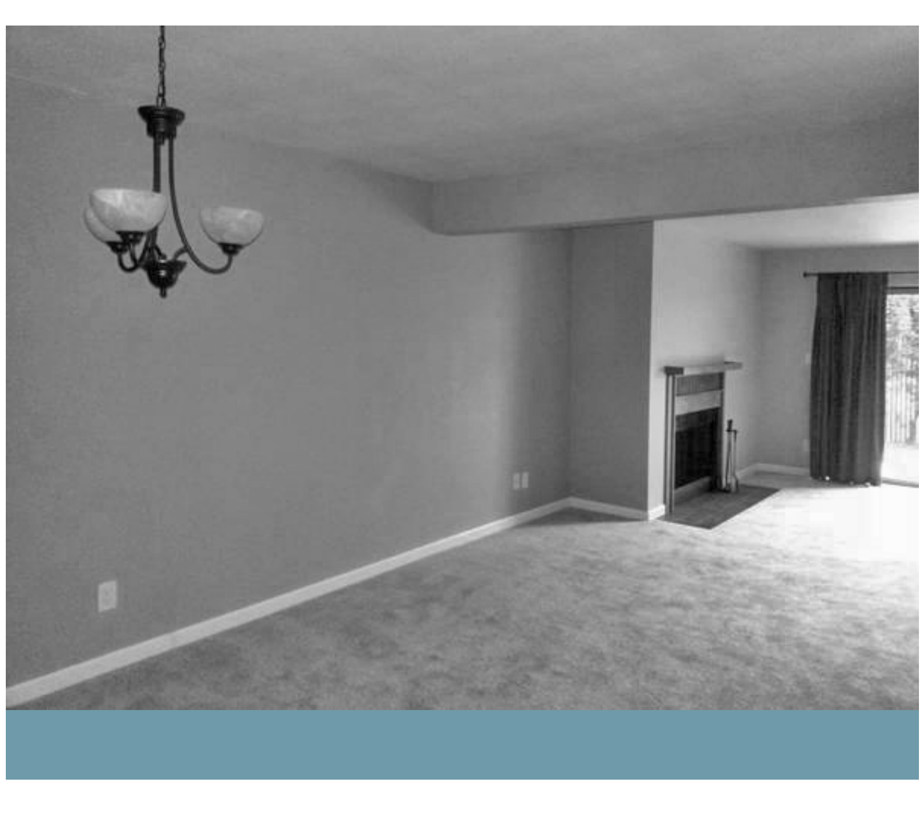
A culture as manically and massively materialistic as ours creates materialistic behavior in its people, especially in those people who’ve been subjected to nothing but the destruction of imagination that this culture calls education, the destruction of autonomy it calls work, and the destruction of activity it calls entertainment. Temporality has long been a sound business strategy because of its proven ability to make consumers feel as though they have to act as fast as possible before a seemingly amazing opportunity slips away. We often find phrases like “for a limited time only,” “three for the price of one through Labor Day weekend,” and “check out our summer blowout sale” plastered with exclamation points framing the facades of retail stores. In the online world, Sevenly, SnapChat, and woot.com are three other great examples of temporality-as-business-strategy...



A Franklin County man who previously admitted to downloading numerous images of child pornography was sentenced to 87 months in federal prison. On Monday, U.S. District Judge Gregory Van Tatenhove sentenced 43-year-old Dennis Hodge for receipt of child pornography. Under federal law, Hodge must serve at least 85 percent of his prison sentence and will be on supervised release for 20 years following the completion of his prison term.

Hodge admitted, during his guilty plea in October 2013, that he downloaded more than 100 images of child pornography using a computer at his Frankfort home. According to the plea agreement, the images depicted children, under 12 years of age, engaged in sexually explicit conduct and many were considered sadistic and violent in nature.

In October 2011, Kentucky State Police seized Hodge’s computer during the execution of a search warrant. Agents later performed a forensic examination of the computer and discovered the child pornography images. Kerry B. Harvey, U.S. Attorney for the Eastern District of Kentucky; Perrye K. Turner, Special Agent in Charge, FBI; and Rodney Brewer, Kentucky State Police Commissioner, jointly announced the sentence today.

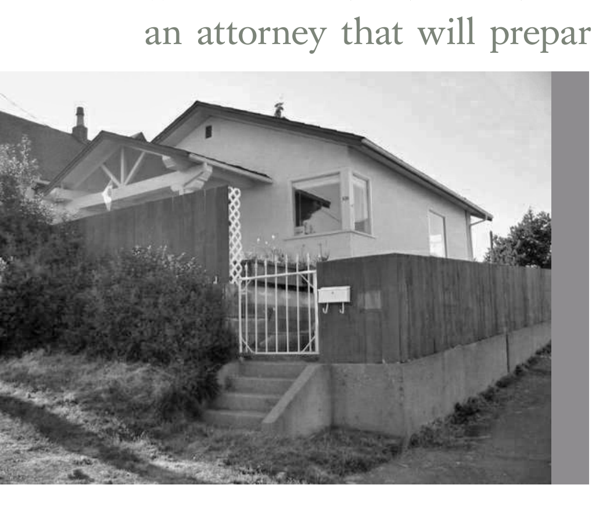
The investigation was conducted by the FBI and the Kentucky State Police. This case was prosecuted by the U.S. Attorney’s Office in Fort Mitchell, Kentucky. Numerous buses also traverse the highways of the country. Domestic bus services are typically very cheap (not more than two or three dollars for even the longest rides) and difficult to understand. The buses themselves are often very well painted and adorned with all kinds of posters and trinkets, ranging from the religious to the pop-culture. Longer bus rides may include a stop in some town where plenty of mujeres, and sometimes their children, too, will board hawking mangos, nuts, water, and even sometimes fried chicken in a box. There is no central agency that coordinates bus routes and schedules, so it is best to just ask the cobrador where the bus is going and when. Most are very friendly and helpful, but do watch out for scams on the buses.

Anyone riding the buses (visitor or local) must take caution in riding the buses and microbuses that are seen around the country. The buses are often crammed and it is very easy to be robbed. The buses are cheap and are a great way to get around, but remember that as a visitor you are at a higher risk of being robbed. If you must ride a bus take extra care of yourself and your belongings.

MR. PANG MAN YIU DAH SING BANK LTD., 108 GLOUCESTER ROAD, WANCHAI, HONG KONG.

Let me start by introducing myself. I am Mr Pang Man Yiu, director of operations, Dah Sing Bank Ltd. I have an obscured business suggestion for you. Before the U.S. and Iraqi war, our client Colonel Fakhri Elmaleh who was with the Iraqi forces and also a business man made a numbered fixed deposit for 18 calendar months, with a value of twenty nine million five hundred thousand United State Dollars in my branch. Upon maturity several notices was sent to him, even during the war. Again after the war another notification was sent and still no response came from him. We later found out that the Colonel and his family had been killed during the war in a bomb blast that hit their home. After further investigations it was also discovered that Colonel Fakhri Elmaleh did not declare any next of kin in his official papers including the paper work of his bank deposit. And he also confided in me the last time he was at my office that no one except me knew of his deposit in my bank.

As you can see, twenty nine million five hundred thousand United States Dollars is still lying in my bank and no one will ever come forward to claim it. What bothers me most is that according to the by-laws of my country at the expiration of 11 years the funds will revert to the ownership of the Hong Kong Government if nobody applies to claim the funds. Against this backdrop, my suggestion to you is that I will like you as a foreigner to stand as the next of kin to Colonel Fakhri Elmaleh so that you will be able to receive his funds. WHAT IS TO BE DONE: I want you to know that I have had everything planned out so that we will come out successful. I have contacted an attorney that will prepare the necessary document that will back you up as the next of kin to Colonel Fakhri Elmaleh, all that is required from you at this stage is for you to provide me with your full name and address so that the attorney can commence his job, after you have been made the next of kin, the attorney will also file in for claims on your behalf and secure the necessary documentation for the movement of the funds to an account that will be provided by you.



There is no risk involved at all in the matter as we are going to adopt a legalized method and the attorney will prepare all the necessary documents. Please endeavor to observe utmost discretion in all matters concerning this issue. Once the funds have been transferred, we shall share in the ratio of 70% for me, 25% for you and 5% for any expenses incurred during the course of this operation. Should you be interested please send me your private phone and fax numbers for easy communication, you can write me via my private box (pangmyiuhk@yahoo.co.jp) and finally of this operation. Proposed construction of 150-foot-tall power lines in the park would cause significant harm to water quality, wildlife habitat, and wading birds including the endangered wood stork. With due respect to your person and much sincerity of purpose, I make this contact with you as I believe that you can be of great assistance to me. My name is Dr.Ibrahim Shorowa, from Ouagadougou Republic of BURKINA FASO , West Africa . Presently I work in the African development Bank as telex manager. I have been searching for your contact since you left our country some years ago.

I do not know whether this is your correct email address or not because I only used your name initials to search for your contact .In case you are not the person I am supposed to contact, please see this as a confidential message and do not reveal it to another person but if you are not the intended receiver, do let me know whether you can be of assistance regarding my proposal below because it is top secret. I am about to retire from active Bank service to start a new life but I am sceptical to reveal this particular secret to a stranger. You must assure me that everything will be handled confidentially because we are not going to suffer again in life.

It has been 10 years now that most of the greedy African Politicians used our bank to launder money overseas through the help of their Political advisers. Most of the funds which they transferred out of the shores of Africa were gold and oil money that was supposed to have been used to develop the continent. Their Political advisers always inflated the amounts before transfer to foreign accounts so I also used the opportunity to divert part of the funds hence I am aware that there is no official trace of how much was transferred as all the accounts used for such transfers were being closed after transfer.

I acted as the Bank Officer to most of the politicians and when I discovered that they were using me to succeed in their greedy act; I also cleaned some of their banking records from the Bank files and no one cared to ask me because the money was too much for them to control. They laundered over $5b Dollars during the process. As I am sending this message to you, I was able to divert thirty five million united state dollars ($35m) to an escrow account belonging to no one in the bank. The bank is anxious now to know who the beneficiary to the funds is because they have made a lot of profits with the funds.

It is more than Eight years now and most of the politicians are no longer using our bank to transfer funds overseas. The ($35) Million Dollars has been LAYING waste but I don't want to retire from the bank without transferring the funds to a foreign account to enable me share the proceeds with the receiver. The money will be shared 60% for me and 40% for you. There is no one coming to ask you about the funds because I secured everything. I only want you to assist me by providing a bank account where the funds can be transferred. You are not to face any difficulties or legal implications as I am going to handle the transfer personally. If you are capable of receiving the funds, do let me know immediately to enable me give you DETAILED information on what to do. For me, I have not stolen the money from anyone because the other people that took the whole money did not face any problems. This is my chance also to grab my own but you must keep the details of the funds secret to avoid any leakages as no one in the bank knows about the funds. Please get back to me if you are interested and capable to handle this project I shall intimate you on what to do when I hear from your confirmation and acceptance. If you are capable of being my trusted associate, do declare your consent to me. What a pleasant surprise to find it this morning in it's usual location on the lawns/patio behind the library. It has molted a bit, gaining more dark feathering on his breast and face, but still stands out compared to the Brewer's Blackbirds. Kevin J. Balzarini, 38, was sentenced by U.S. District Court Judge Rya W. Zobel to 36 months in prison and five years of supervised release. In December 2013, Balzarini pleaded guilty to possession of child pornography.

An officer, acting in an undercover capacity, signed onto a peer-to-peer network and observed that Balzarini was offering files indicative of child pornography to share with network users. The officer requested and received an image containing child pornography. A search warrant was then executed at Balzarini's residence, where computer media containing more than 2,000 images and videos of child pornography was seized. At the time of the search, Balzarini admitted to agents that he had been looking at child pornography for a number of years and stated that his interest was in children 13 years old and younger. Printed images of child pornography were recovered from Balzarini's bedroom, as well as a container of girls' underwear that Balzarini admitted he took from homes when he made deliveries as part of his employment. United States Attorney Carmen M. Ortiz; Vincent B. Lisi, Special Agent in Charge of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Boston Field Division; Colonel Timothy P. Alben, Superintendent of the Massachusetts State Police; and Bridgewater Police Chief Christopher D. Delmonte, made the announcement today. The case was prosecuted by Eve A. As the number of deportations under President Obama approaches two million people and immigration reform lags under Republican obstruction, undocumented immigrants are fighting back through acts of civil disobedience. Hundreds have gathered at the U.S.-Mexico border this week to support a group of undocumented youths and families seeking re-entry into the United States. Much further north, in Tacoma, Washington, a hunger strike at the Northwest Detention Center that started with as many as 750 participants has entered its sixth day. The hunger strikers say they are protesting record deportations and prison conditions that pay them as little as $1 a day. When a British man took a holiday to visit relatives in Pakistan in January 2012 he had every reason to look forward to returning home. He worked full time at the mobile phone shop beneath his flat in southeast London, he had a busy social life and preparations for his family's visit to the UK were in full flow. Two years later, the man, who cannot be named for legal reasons, is stranded in Pakistan, and claims he is under threat from the Taliban and unable to find work to support his wife and three children. He is one of 27 British nationals since 2006 who have had their citizenship removed under secretive government orders on the grounds that their presence in the UK is "not conducive to the public good". He is the first to speak publicly about his ordeal. "My British citizenship was everything to me. I could travel around the world freely. That was my identity but now I am nobody." Francis Hector Calar, age 53, of Colorado Springs, Colorado, was arrested earlier this week after military police officers caught him pleasuring himself in his car outside a building with unsecured WiFi on Fort Carson Army Base, U.S. Attorney John Walsh and FBI Denver Special Agent in Charge Thomas Ravenelle announced. Following the military arrest, an investigation revealed that Calar possessed child pornography. He was arrested on Monday, March 10, 2014, and charged with this crime on Tuesday, March 11, 2014. He appeared in court on the 11th and was advised of the charges pending against him and his rights. Today, Calar appeared in U.S. District Court in Denver before Magistrate Judge Michael E. Hegarty for a detention hearing and a preliminary hearing. Calar waived his right to a preliminary hearing. The government requested the defendant be detained without bond. Magistrate Judge Hegarty stated he will issue a written ruling regarding detention on Monday.

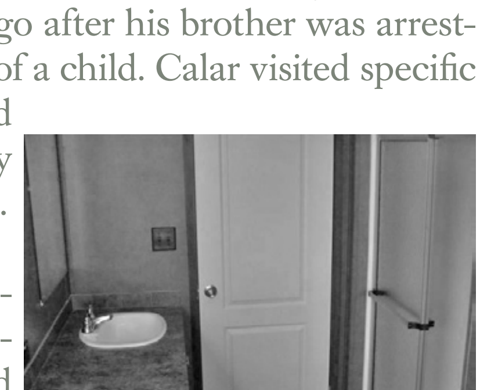
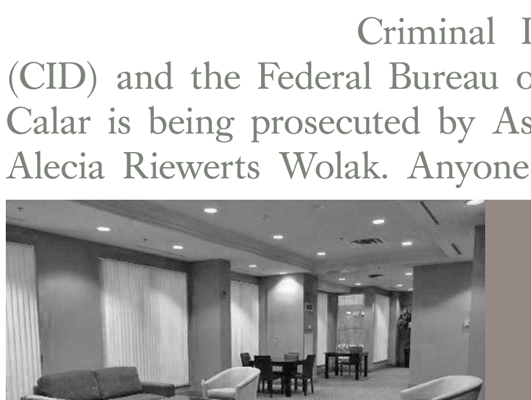
According to the affidavit in support of the criminal complaint, at approximately 10:30 a.m., a military police officer was dispatched to investigate a complaint of a suspicious vehicle parked in a public parking lot located at a building on Fort Carson Army Base. Upon arrival, the officer observed an individual sitting in the driver's seat of a green-colored Ford sedan. The officer attempted to contact the individual, later identified as Francis Hector Calar; however, Calar was intently focused on an image of the screen of his laptop computer. The officer saw that Calar was masturbating to a graphic image of child pornography. After finally noticing the officer's presence, Calar quickly closed his laptop and threw it on the passenger seat. He then put his private parts away. He was then ordered to exit the car and was taken into custody.

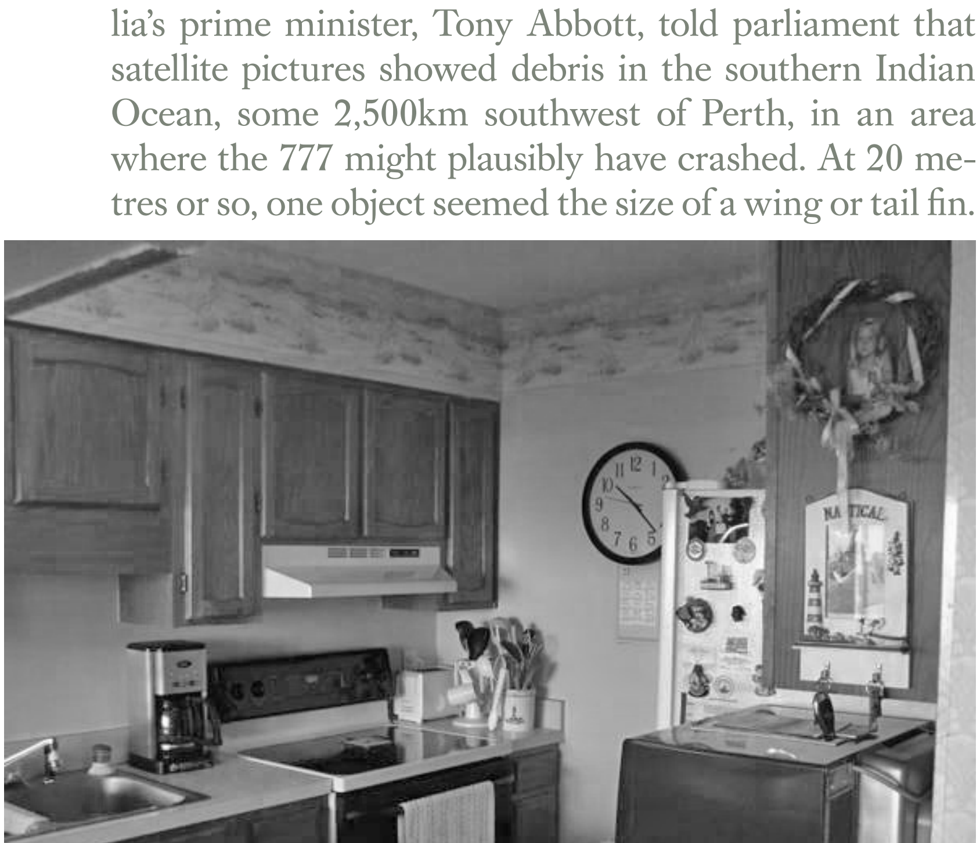
Subsequent investigation revealed that Calar, a civilian military contract employee, often parked in the place where he was initially contacted because he was able to obtain unsecured WiFi access to child pornography. He used this access to view child pornography. Calar first became interested in child pornography approximately five or six years ago after his brother was arrested for the sexual assault of a child. Calar visited specific chat rooms and searched for child pornography during breaks from work.



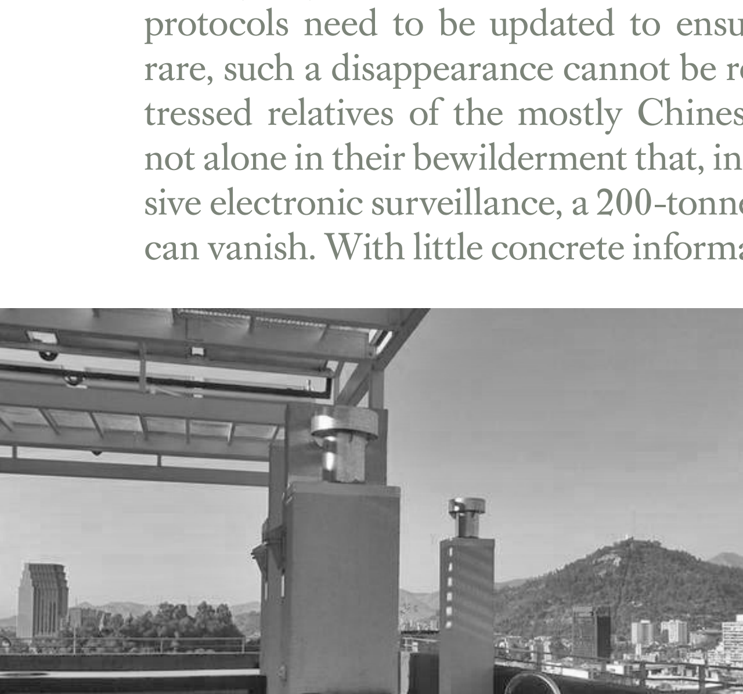
Calar is active with children, coaching youth volleyball for young girls and youth baseball for young boys. He is also active in his church and has previously taught Sunday school for children at his church. While there is no current evidence Calar, pictured below, was sexually involved with a minor child, authorities request that if anyone knows of any inappropriate contact involving Calar and a child, they call the FBI at 303-629-7171. If convicted of possession of child pornography, Calar faces not more than 10 years in federal prison and up to a $250,000 fine. The investigation was conducted by the U.S. Army Criminal Investigative Division (CID) and the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI). Calar is being prosecuted by Assistant U.S. Attorney Alecia Riewerts Wolak. Anyone accused of committing a federal felony crime has a Constitutional right to be indicted by a federal grand jury.

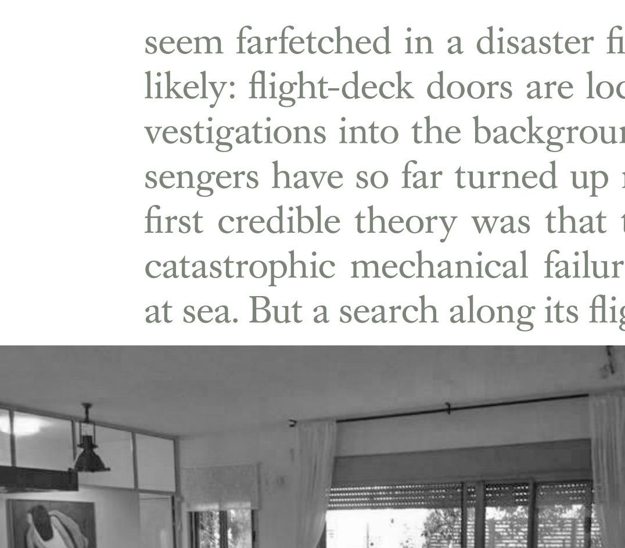


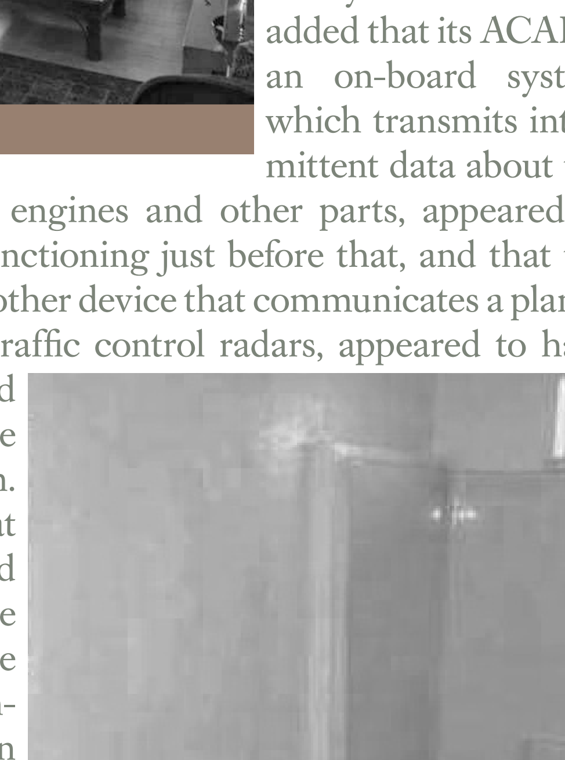
The charges contained in the criminal complaint are allegations, and the defendant is presumed innocent unless and until proven guilty. "ALL right, good night," were the last words heard by air-traffic controllers from Malaysia Airlines flight MH370 on March 8th. That makes them a rarity in the baffling story of the disappearance of a Boeing 777 carrying 239 passengers and crew from Kuala Lumpur to Beijing: an undisputed fact. In the days following, the Malaysian government provided information only in dribs and drabs, much of it confusing, even contradictory. It seemed possible that the agonising wait for the passengers' families might be nearing an end. On March 20th Australia's prime minister, Tony Abbott, told parliament that satellite pictures showed debris in the southern Indian Ocean, some 2,500km southwest of Perth, in an area where the 777 might plausibly have crashed. At 20 metres or so, one object seemed the size of a wing or tail fin.



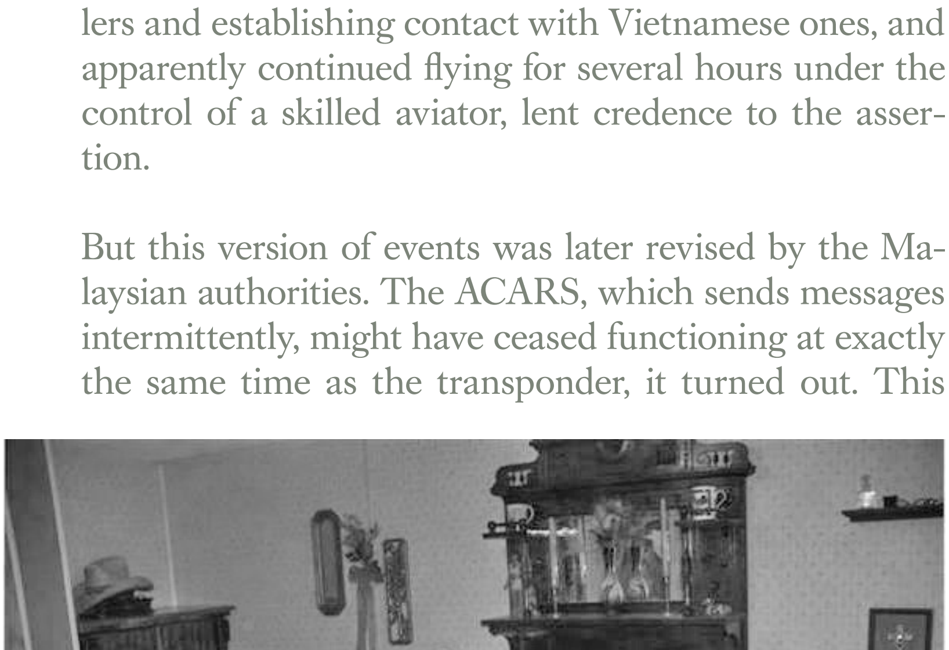
Aircraft and ships were headed to the area to investigate further. If the plane's wreckage is found, and especially if its "black box" flight recorder can be recovered, what happened to flight 370 should become clearer. What is already beyond doubt is that air-traffic communication protocols need to be updated to ensure that, however rare, such a disappearance cannot be repeated. The distressed relatives of the mostly Chinese passengers are not alone in their bewilderment that, in a world of pervasive electronic surveillance, a 200-tonne passenger plane can vanish. With little concrete information, speculation has run wild. Commentators of varying degrees of authority have attempted to fill the blank canvas with theories ranging from an accident to suicidal tendencies on the flight deck, and conspiracies of a complexity that would seem farfetched in a disaster film. Hijacking seems unlikely: flight-deck doors are locked and sturdy. And investigations into the backgrounds of the crew and passengers have so far turned up no plausible motive. The first credible theory was that the plane had suffered a catastrophic mechanical failure and crashed, probably at sea. But a search along its flight path failed to turn up any sign of wreckage. Then news emerged that Malaysian military radar had tracked the plane apparently turning west off its route shortly after the final radio message. Malaysian authorities added that its ACARS, an on-board system which transmits intermittent data about the performance of engines and other parts, appeared to have stopped functioning just before that, and that the transponder, another device that communicates a plane's position to air-traffic control radars, appeared to have been switched off around the time of the turn. The fact that the pilots had not reported the switch-off led the authorities to infer foul play. On March 15th the Malaysian prime minister blamed "deliberate action", with suspicion falling on the pilot or copilot. That the plane vanished between signing off with Malaysian air-traffic controllers and establishing contact with Vietnamese ones, and apparently continued flying for several hours under the control of a skilled aviator, lent credence to the assertion.

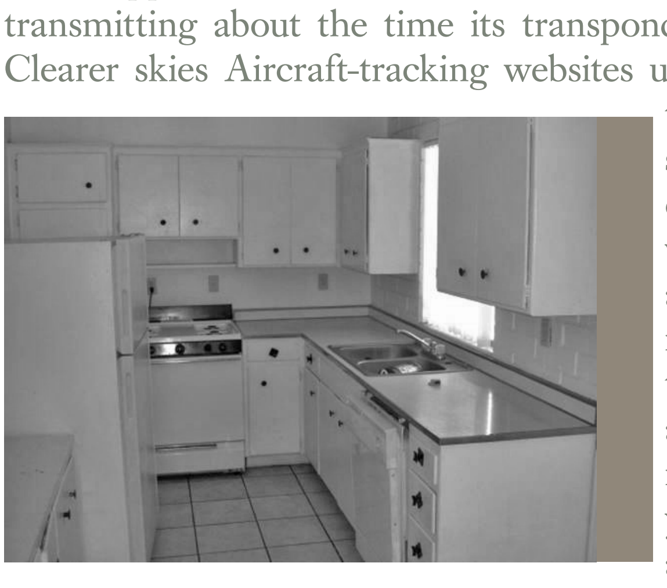


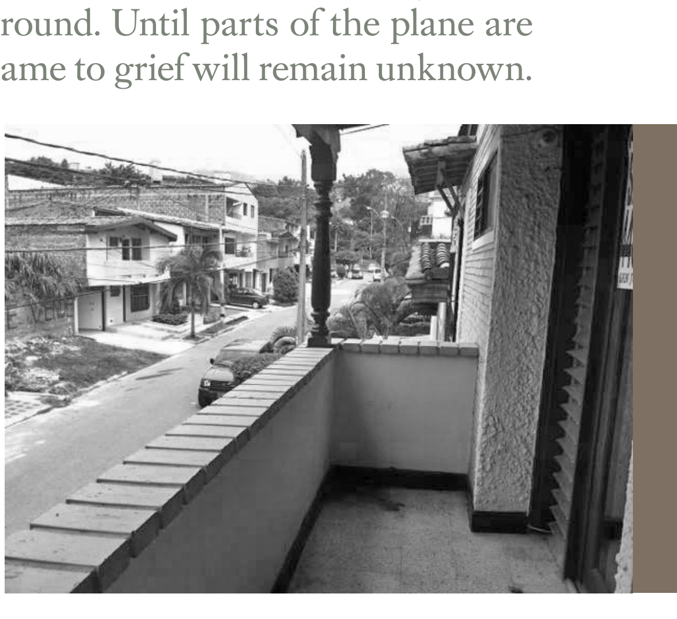




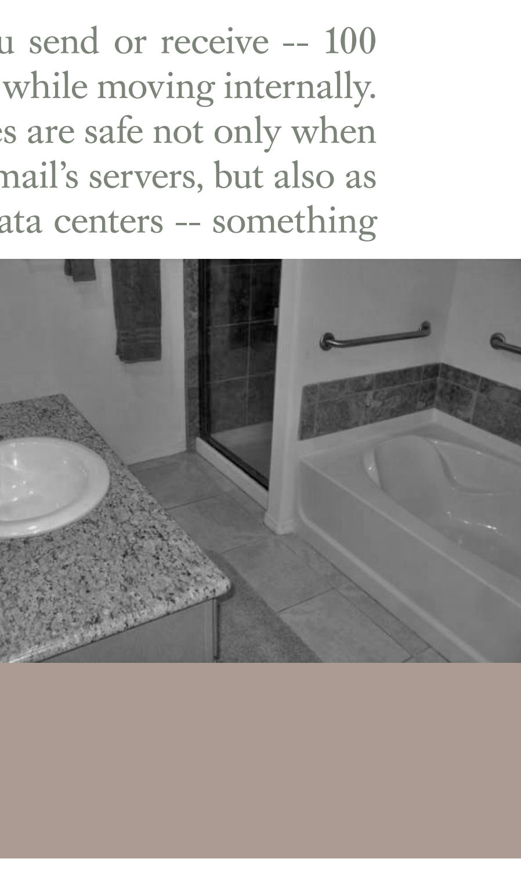
But this version of events was later revised by the Malaysian authorities. The ACARS, which sends messages intermittently, might have ceased functioning at exactly the same time as the transponder, it turned out. This makes the notion of an emergency more likely, perhaps a fire that incapacitated crew and passengers, leaving the plane to fly on ungoverned. The risk of an electrical fire is one reason why pilots are able to switch off on-board equipment, including that responsible for communications. But many are now calling for an automatic alert to be sent in such circumstances, so that ground authorities know that they should start tracking the plane with conventional radar. The ACARS has at least provided information about the jet's continued path, albeit wildly imprecise. Though it stopped transmitting data it continued to "ping" (send out a signal with no information other than that it was still operating) for six hours. That is about how long the plane's fuel tanks would have taken to empty. But the pings were only picked up by one satellite, making triangulation to establish the plane's path during that time impossible. Malaysian military radar apparently lost contact with the plane as it flew over the Indian Ocean. (According to reports on March 19th, Thai military radar may also have tracked it turning off course.) That suggests it is somewhere on an arc hundreds of miles wide running from Kazakhstan almost to Antarctica (see map). Planes and ships from 26 countries have now joined the hunt. The northern part seems less plausible: it approaches land and passes through several countries with military radar primed to look for unidentified aircraft. But to the south, where the search is now focused, there is little coverage. The information age is taking to the skies only slowly. Planes far out at sea keep in touch using VHF radio, and the newer ones send ACARS data continuously via satellite. Many are also equipped with ADS-B, another system that uses satellites and GPS to pinpoint their location when they are out of radar range. But flight 370's ADS-B seems to have stopped transmitting about the time its transponder went off. Clearer skies Aircraft-tracking websites use several of these newer sources of data. They will eventually replace radar when their safety and reliability are beyond dispute, a long process in the plodding world of aviation regulation. And the next generation of communications technology, due in around a decade, will relay all flight information at once, acting like a real-time version of the black box that all planes now carry. Adding internet connectivity, as many airlines are doing, will provide another way to get a message to the ground. Until parts of the plane are examined, how it came to grief will remain unknown. In the meantime, for the grieving relatives, there is little comfort to be taken from the fact that such mysteries should soon be a thing of the past.

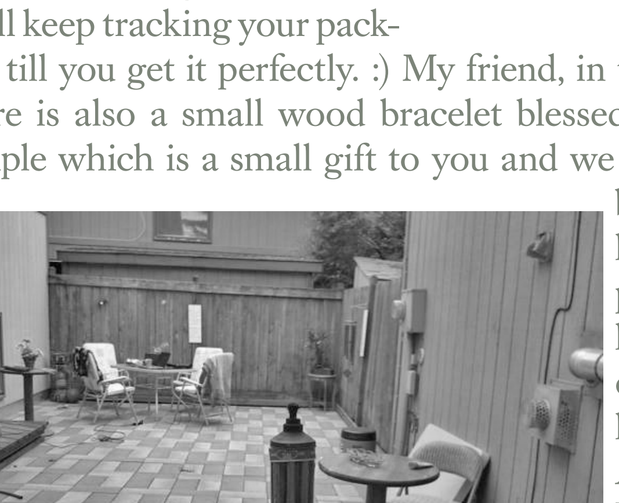






Your email is important to you, and making sure it stays safe and always available is important to us. As you go about your day reading, writing and checking messages, there are tons of security measures running behind the scenes to keep your email safe, secure, and there whenever you need it. Starting today, Gmail will always use an encrypted HTTPS connection when you check or send email. Gmail has supported HTTPS since the day it launched, and in 2010 we made HTTPS the default. Today's change means that no one can listen in on your messages as they go back and forth between you and Gmail's servers no matter if you're using public WiFi or logging in from your computer, phone or tablet. In addition, every single email message you send or receive -- 100 percent of them -- is encrypted while moving internally. This ensures that your messages are safe not only when they move between you and Gmail's servers, but also as they move between Google's data centers -- something we made a top priority after last summer's revelations. Little do they know that behind this colorful and lively image is a shameful story of persecution that started five hundred years ago during Brazil's colonization, and continues to this day.





When the first Europeans arrived in Brazil in 1500 there were up to 11 million tribal people. Five centuries of murder, torture, disease and exploitation saw their population plummet to 100,000 by the 1950s. The persecution continues; today five tribes number fewer than five people, the smallest just one individual. Gold miners brought massacre and disease to the Yanomami in the 1980s. One in every five Indians died before worldwide protest forced the government to evict the miners. We can never fully exhaust the ordinary - how could we? For as sure as we try to get close, the ordinary becomes something else. Elusive - in the same way that words, peoples, names and symbols become strange if we concentrate on them too long. Neither does anyone grasp the ordinary in sheer ignorance, because its ordinariness just evaporates in retrospect. The ordinary claims little attention only because it is ordinary and is implicitly taken on that account. The extraordinariness of the ordinary has to be rejected if its implicitness becomes something we unavoidably accept. Yet, its givenness appears unproblematic insofar as it remains unacknowledged. The ordinary is what happens when we're concentrating on something else: it is what constitutes the ontological furniture of the world. Dear Friend, How are you today? A church in southern Italy dismantled by an artist who planned to rebuild it at New York's Museum of Modern Art is being returned to its original site, Italian police said Saturday. Italian artist Francesco Vezzoli last year carefully took apart and wrapped up the pretty church in the small village of Montegiordano in Calabria, built at the end of the 19th century and later desecrated -- much to the horror of local inhabitants, who said it was national heritage. Their protests sparked an investigation by the local cultural superintendent in Cosenza and the shipment out of Italy was blocked in October, with police seizing the huge crates of stones in a hangar in the local port. "The sections of the church were found in the port of Gioia Tauro, perfectly packaged and arranged in 11 containers, ready to be sent to the United States, without any export, Tammy Dickinson, United States Attorney for the Western District of Missouri, announced that a Nevada, Missouri man who is a registered sex offender pleaded guilty in federal court today to receiving and distributing child pornography over the Internet. David Lee Knowles, 55, of Nevada, pleaded guilty before

U.S. Magistrate Judge David P. Rush to the charge contained in an April 2, 2013 federal indictment. Knowles is a registered sex offender as a result of his 1997 conviction for sexual assault. By pleading guilty today, Knowles admitted that he received and distributed child pornography between May 31, 2012 and January 3, 2013. A law enforcement officer was conducting an undercover investigation into the distribution of child pornography with peer-to-peer file-sharing networks. Knowles' computer was identified as sharing videos of child pornography over the Internet. Knowles must forfeit to the government any property used to commit the offense, including an iPad2, a desktop computer, an iPhone, and an external hard drive. Under federal statutes, Knowles is subject to a mandatory minimum sentence of 15 years in federal prison without parole, up to a sentence of 40 years in federal prison without parole, plus a fine up to $250,000. A sentencing hearing will be scheduled after the completion of a presentence investigation by the United States Probation Office. This case is being prosecuted by Assistant U.S. Attorney Patrick Carney. It was investigated by the FBI and the Joplin, Missouri Police Department.

Good Luck, Dan Given its obvious importance in Mesoamerican religion, sacrifice has engaged scholars and captured the imaginations of all who have studied the ancient Maya. Nevertheless, in the face of oppression, pillage and abandonment, our reply is life. Neither floods nor plagues, nor famines nor cataclysms, nor even eternal war century after century have managed to reduce the tenacious advantage that life has over death. It is an advantage which is on the increase and quickens apace: every year, there are seventy-four million more births than deaths, a sufficient number of new living souls to populate New York every year seven times over. The majority of these are born in countries with few resources, and among these, naturally, the countries of Latin America. On the other hand, the more prosperous nations have succeeded in accumulating sufficient destructive power to annihilate one hundred times over not only every human being who has ever existed but every living creature ever to have graced this planet of misfortune. The people shall have the right to keep and bear arms for the defense of themselves and the state, but the military shall be kept in strict subordination to the civil power. One of the most disturbing ways that climate change is already playing out is through what ecologists call "mismatch" or "mistiming." This is the process whereby warming causes animals to fall out of step with a critical food source, particularly at breeding times, when a failure to find enough food can lead to rapid population losses. The migration patterns of many songbird species, for instance, have evolved over millennia so that eggs hatch precisely when food sources such as caterpillars are at their most abundant, providing parents with ample nourishment for their hungry young. But because spring now often arrives early, the caterpillars are hatching earlier too, which means that in some areas they are less plentiful when the chicks hatch, threatening a number of health and fertility impacts. Similarly, in West Greenland, caribou are arriving at their calving grounds only to find themselves out of sync with the forage plants they have relied on for thousands of years, now growing earlier thanks to rising temperatures. That is leaving female caribou with less energy for lactation, reproduction and feeding their young, a mismatch that has been linked to sharp decreases in calf births and survival rates. Many scientists have used Condorcet's idea (known as the jury theorem) as a launching pad for exploring collective decision-making. They've expanded the basic theory to include more features of crowds -- such as the way information can move through them. They've tested out versions of the jury theorem on real groups of humans and animals. And their research has shown that crowds really can be wise. People can indeed make better decisions in groups than on their own. And while animals may not be able to pick presidents, they can also make good decisions in groups. It may be hard for an individual fish to recognize a predator in a murky ocean and escape in time. But a school of fish can pool its uncertain information to avoid enemies.

The unique aspect about this family unit is that it contains three (3) adults and three (3) fledglings. Two of the three adults are believed to be male. One is a mature adult; the other is theorized to be a yearling male who never lost its affinity for the nest site and learned to mimic its father's behavior to care for the female during incubation and brooding in a way that is acceptable to both adults. During my visit, it seemed the owls were in near constant communication with one another. If the adults were not amidst a three-way (hoo-hoo-to-hoo-ooo, hoo-hoo-hoo-to-whooo-ooo), the eldest fledgling would be calling for food with its best high-pitched whiny/shriek. Intermittently, one of the adults would perch outside the nest and issue a throaty, cluck-cluck-cluck-call to the remaining nestling (we think) encouraging them to venture outside the comfort/security of the nest to the dinner table.

Pro-democracy activists in Hong Kong were warned on Thursday against holding mass protests as part of their campaign for the right to choose their own candidates for a poll in 2017 to elect the capitalist hub's next leader. Hong Kong's Chief Executive Leung Chun-ying said during a stormy legislative session that the authorities were ready to act if the activists pursued a campaign of civil disobedience named "Occupy Central" to seal off the city's business district unless Beijing allows a truly democratic poll. "We are not going to sit with arms folded, and we are not going to underestimate the seriousness of the matter," Leung said, as several radical lawmakers raised objections and called for his resignation. "Even if you do so, you are not going to force the central authorities to accede to your demand," Leung said. "I, myself, the Security Bureau and police put a lot of emphasis on this and we are working on all fronts, including getting prepared for operations," he added, without saying what measures might be taken. Turner and the Sea at the National Maritime Museum is the first full-scale examination of J.M.W Turner's lifelong fascination with the sea. Dramatic, contemplative, violent, beautiful, dangerous and sublime the sea was the perfect subject to showcase Turner's singular talents, and the 120 pieces on display include some of the most celebrated paintings of the artist's long career. The extraordinary quality of the works gathered together for Turner and the Sea confirms his status as the pre-eminent painter of water, and demonstrates his unique ability to represent the elemental power of the sea. The exhibition features items on loan from some of the world's most prestigious artistic institutions including: The National Gallery, Tate, Yale Center for British Art, British Museum, Metropolitan Museum of Art, Royal Collection Trust, Calouste Gulbenkian Foundation, Lisbon. A single-payer system would all but eliminate anybody dying unnecessarily due to lack of access to healthcare. Our Declaration of Independence states, "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness." How can somebody have life and happiness, without their health? Despite the glaring hypocrisy of rich, white males who owned slaves stating all men are created equal, we have come a long way from 1776. Yet when it comes to the very basic need, we are left to the whim of a business. Single-payer is inevitable, and the ACA is a giant step in that direction. We need must hold our officials to a higher standard which will get us there faster. 40,000 people a year is absolutely unacceptable. Vermont saw the writings on the wall. Will the rest of us? Climate Talks in Warsaw, it is easy to succumb to despair. The world's elite, it is painfully clear, will do little to halt the accelerating destruction of the ecosystem and eventually the human species. We have, through our ingenuity and hubris, unleashed the next great mass extinction on the planet. And I suspect the reason we have never discovered signs of intelligent life elsewhere in the universe is because extraterrestrial societies that achieved similar levels of technological development also destroyed themselves. There are probably more wreckages of advanced civilizations, cursed by poisoned ecosystems, floating through the universe than we imagine. Up until the 1890s, a corporation couldn't last more than 40 years in any state - which prevented them from being used as a tool to accumulate massive and multigenerational wealth. A corporation had to behave in the public interest, and when they weren't, thousands of them every year were given the corporate death penalty, their assets dissolved and their stockholders losing everything (but nothing more than) they had invested. Over the years, as the Supreme Court has given more and more power to wealthy individuals and corporations, these responsibilities receded so far into the background that in one state, Delaware, your articles of incorporation can be a single sentence stating that you intend to "Do whatever is legal in the state of Delaware." Which is probably why more than half of all the companies listed on the New York Stock Exchange are Delaware corporations. Provenance: From the estate of Wynn Bullock to John Stevenson to the current owner in 2004. According to local law enforcement officials, members of Inagawa-Kai, a subgroup of the Yamaguchi-Gumi, the most violent subgroup of the Yakuza, recruit couriers to smuggle crystal methamphetamine to the CNMI from Asian countries via the Philippines. These couriers transport most of the crystal methamphetamine to the CNMI aboard commercial aircraft. In many cases the couriers are unwitting accomplices who are offered a vacation in Saipan in return for transporting a package or other item to Saipan. The crystal methamphetamine often is hidden in the shafts of golf clubs, in bottles of shampoo, or in other items that are then given to the couriers. After arriving in the CNMI, couriers typically stay in a hotel room for up to a week until they are contacted by an individual who retrieves the package. The Yakuza also reportedly transports handguns to the CNMI along with shipments of crystal methamphetamine, increasing the potential for violence related to the drug.

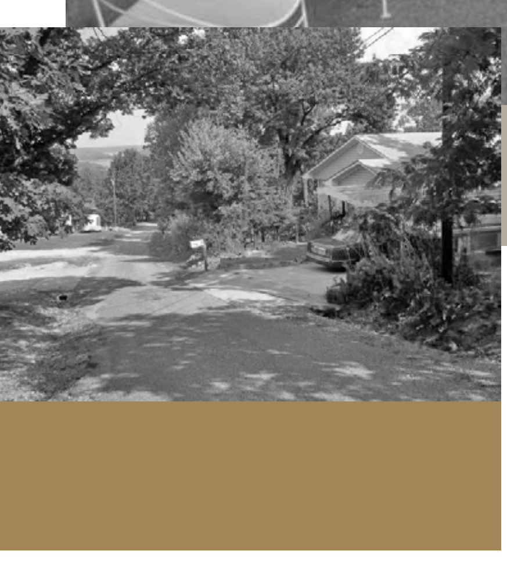
Affronti was charged with possession of child pornography, contact with a minor, indecent assault, furnishing alcohol to a minor, corruption of minors and other related charges. According to arrest papers, Affronti became involved with three girls - ages 13, 16 and 17 - in May. He was arrested after an investigation by Freeland police, with assistance from the Luzerne County District Attorney's Office. Arrest papers indicated that police found nude photos of minor females and that Affronti allegedly came in contact with one of the females without her consent. Affronti told the judge that he has since moved to Bloomsburg after living in Freeland for one year. Dixon set bail at $200,000 straight cash due to the seriousness of the charges. Affronti pleaded with the judge not to send him to jail and Dixon said that if Affronti could get 10 percent of the bail figure he would allow his release until his preliminary hearing. Affronti said he didn't think he could make bail and was remanded to the Luzerne County Correctional Facility in Wilkes-Barre. 1. How does one make sense of the injustice of Johannesburg's "clean sweep" campaign? In the name of cleaning up the streets of downtown Johannesburg, thousands of street traders have had their stalls demolished in recent days. The lack of strong or widespread objection from the public and urban planners in response to this merciless act by the authorities is remarkable. Perhaps more disappointing is the lack of solidarity action on the part of civil society organisations. A systemic allergic reaction also may include nausea, vomiting, diarrhea and dizziness. When the most serious of these reactions occurs anaphylaxis the person experiences one or more of the following: wheezing, hoarseness, swelling of the tongue, fainting, difficulty breathing followed by a drop in blood pressure that can lead to shock and death.

Mocek says he has been taking pictures of the Seattle federal building and the vehicles parked outside "two or three days a week for the past few weeks." He is using the images to make a record of license plate numbers, which he plans to eventually publish in order to draw attention to police use of automatic license plate readers, or ALPRs. These small devices are mounted on police cruisers or objects like road signs and bridges. They use high-speed cameras to photograph and catalog thousands of license plates per minute.



According to a recent ACLU report titled "You Are Being Tracked," 600 local and state police departments, along with federal agencies, are using ALPRs to create "enormous databases of innocent motorists' location information." Some of the data, including the license plate number, date, time and location of every scan, is stored indefinitely "with few or no restrictions to protect privacy rights." /2/2013 - Outbound and Inbound mail delayed A spammer compromised one of the email accounts hosted on our mail server and used it to send a large volume of spam. This has caused intermittent delays in message delivery since Monday. Currently the server is working at full capacity to remove the Spam messages from the mail queue. Once complete we will re-enable the server to send out messages. Coincidentally, both data centers used by Reflexion, our inbound Spam filter provider, had an outage this morning. Messages were spooled and are now starting to be delivered. One will find inbound messages delayed as a result. Messages viewed in the Reflexion report interface will show the message when it arrived in the spool; the actual delivery time will be later. We apologize for the inconvenience. 50,000 garment workers demanding higher pay flooded the streets of Dhaka, Bangladesh Saturday, and 20,000 shut down dozens of factories by walking off the job, in the largest demonstrations to ever sweep the notoriously dangerous and low-wage Bangladesh garment industry. The protests continued on Sunday, with workers and their supporters blocking traffic, marching along a key highway, and clashing with police who shot rubber bullets and tear gas at crowds of thousands. The underside of the tech-fueled housing boom sweeping San Francisco burst noisily to the surface Wednesday when hundreds of protesters blocked the doorway to a weather-beaten building near Nob Hill to resist the eviction of an elderly Chinese American couple and their disabled daughter. The eight-unit complex at the corner of Jackson and Larkin streets had been emptied over the past year of all occupants except for the Lee family, which has lived in their two-bedroom apartment for 34 years. Poon Heung Lee, an 80-year-old retired hotel housekeeper, said he can't find anything to equal the $778 he pays monthly for his rent-controlled home, so his intention was to rebuff sheriff's deputies if they showed up to carry out the vacate order due to be served Wednesday. Of course they shut the Federal government down. Tea Party Republicans long for the days when there were no government authorities to enforce laws and restrain the power of unchecked wealth, the days when there was no Justice Department, no SEC, no other agencies protecting Americans from the misdeeds of bankers and corporate titans. Officers shot Bennet, claiming in their report that he lunged at them with a knife. Video of the incident, however, shows Bennett rolling backward in his chair as two officers approach. They draw their guns when Bennett stands up. Bennett appears to stand with his arms at his side, yet the officers fire at him. He collapses in the street. "Officers drew their weapons, they told him to freeze or something of that nature, ordered him to drop the weapon or something of that nature and he just froze," said Maurice Bunch, the neighbor whose security camera recorded the incident. "He didn't move an inch. As you can see in the video they just opened fire." A homeless man is in jail after throwing pieces of concrete at a St. Petersburg hotel. Police say 41-year-old David Allen Jensen told them he was trying to get inside the hotel early Wednesday because zombies were chasing him. They say he broke the glass at the Hilton St. Petersburg Bayfront hotel with a doughnut-sized chunk of concrete used to protect sprinkler heads. Nearby security guards told police Jensen was trying to open doors to a number of cars. Jensen told police he was looking for tobacco. Jensen faces multiple charges, including burglary and throwing a deadly missile into a building. He remained in jail Thursday. Jail records did not list an attorney for Jensen.
